"An abridgement of the author's important work on the subject which has been widely known for many years. To reduce three large volumes into one small one, severe compression was necessary; but the author has avoided the mistake of attempting merely to popularize. While he has had to omit or pass by summarily a good many minor scholars, he has taken care that the greater men shall not suffer injustice. In particular we are glad to see that he has retained sufficient indication of titles and editions, and while shortening, has not suppressed his foot-notes. He has even been able to include a fair proportion of the illustrations which formed an interesting feature in the larger book." Eng. hist. rev.

Scientific outlook. Norton 1931 227p $3 500

1 Civilization 2 Science 31-25032

This volume in considering the effect of science upon human life examines: first, the nature and scope of scientific knowledge; second, the increased power of manipulation derived from scientific technique; and third, the changes in social life and in traditional institutions which must result from the new forms of organization that scientific technique demands

"This book, though eminently readable, is not a cheerful one." Spectator

Science marches on. Harcourt 1939 420p illus $3 500

1 Science 2 Science—History (W) 40-3083

"This book tells the story of the nature and acquisition of knowledge. . . [It is] an attempt to present science 'whole,' particular discoveries being cited more by way of illustration than for their own sakes." Preface

"Alike for its graphic description of a large number of important facts and for its helpful correlation of topics too often thought of as unconnected, the book deserves to be widely read." Times (London) lit. sup.

Sullivan, John William Navin, 1866-1937

Limitations of science. Viking 1933 307p $2.75 500

1 Science 2 Science—History 33-30585

"A clear definition of the nature and scope of all the sciences, with some stimulating speculation about the future. The author's interest lies in the relation of science and philosophy and the title refers to the limitations of what science has to say to philosophers. His conclusion is that 'The great intellectual conquests of the near future, the next great step forward in the development of the human consciousness, may be expected to come from biology.' " Bkl.

1 Science 38-12421

A reprint of a book first published 1922 in 4 volumes and still available at $5 each (Putnam)

Gives the essentials of present day science. "Designed for the general reader, who lacks time and opportunity for special study but takes an intelligent interest in the progress of science. The editor maintains that technicalities, altho clearly necessary for terse and precise scientific description can be reduced to a minimum without sacrificing accuracy when the object in view is to explain the gist of the matter. For further study a list of books is given at the end of each chapter." Book rev. digest

"Delightfully readable, many facts well known to a teacher of science appearing in so novel a form that they are invested with new interest that impels the reading of familiar subjects which cruder handling would render wearisome. Inaccuracies are rare, although some have been noticed; they are, I imagine largely due to oversight." R. S. Lull in Yale review

1 National parks and reserves 2 Natural history—America 3 Natural monuments 26-8906

"Comprehensive reference work, describing for each of the states and countries between the Arctic Archipelago and the Amazon Valley, the territory as it was before being modified by civilization; general physiographic features; general and local plant and animal communities; and natural areas, such as forests, parks, and reserves. Contains introductory matter on the uses, values, and management of natural areas, and the original biota of the Americas north of the Amazon." Pittsburgh

"The various accounts contain a vast amount of valuable descriptive information in readily accessible form. It would be necessary to consult hundreds of volumes or papers to find what is here concentrated in one, and there is in addition much that is new. The sixteen line maps will prove valuable to many students who desire a graphic view of the broad biogeographical relations. Naturally these different regional accounts are of unequal value." "Twenty-nine delightful, intimate essays on plants and animals, written with scientific accuracy, simplicity and charm of style. Reveals the author's personal preferences and predilections,—his liking for the serpent and the pig, his prejudice against the dog,—as well as his keen and affectionate observation of nature and her ways." N.Y. state lib.

"By some charm he captivates readers unpractised in his themes, utter ignoramuses in his school, of whom we cannot believe that he ever thinks without an indulgent or ironical smile. Yet what we win from him is priceless. We recover a foregone and secret understanding." Times (London) lit. sup.

Hind in Richmond Park. Dutton 1923 xxiii,296p $2 502

1 Natural history 23-4383

"W. H. Hudson's last book 'A Hind in Richmond Park' is perhaps more the work of the essayist than the naturalist. He gives more interpretation of human life and conduct and less observation of the ways of birds. The hind whose experiences in Richmond park give a title to the first essay and to the volume was merely an animal excited by the color red. Mr. Hudson has something to say about the animal's sense of color and also about the animal's sense of smell." Springfield Republican

Hudson, William H.—Continued

"We will not say that this volume, which W. H. Hudson did not live to see through the press, is its author's best book; but we are almost certain that it is his most characteristic one. Here, we feel, he wrote as he loved to write, in an easy, speculative vein that takes so cunning yet seemingly artless expression that the author often appears to be musing aloud and not addressing an audience." Scoville, Samuel, 1872-

Runaway days. Harcourt 1927 254p o.p. 1939 502

1 Nature study 27-9655

"In 'Runaway Days' the reader will go with Mr. Scoville in search of a duck hawk's nest high on a cliff of the Palisades; he will spend a day in a tree-top and see the birds that came there between dawn and dusk; he will find the rare nest of Philohela the woodcock and of the great pileated woodpecker and many other nests that few men or women know; he will visit the bald eagle at home and the grim raven, and he will learn much about the ways of foxes, squirrels and other fourfoots of the eastern woods. And always the story of these adventurings is told exuberantly, with a lively humor brightening the telling of each tale, and, underlying it all, a keen sense of the beauty that is about us out of doors." "Altho somewhat smaller than Hutchinson's, this new one volume cyclopedia should prove an economical investment for the popular library. Its ten contributing and eleven consulting editors provide acceptable authority. The compactness of its arrangement assures accessibility of its material. There are, in addition to the 10,000 entries arranged alphabetically, numerous cross references printed in bold face type, somewhat as in the 'Columbia encyclopedia.' The illustrations include small maps, diagrams, and photographs." Shores

Published in England under title: Scientific riddles

"It is the chief end of science to make things clearer, but it is one of its educative aims to foster the inquisitive spirit, and that is the aim of this book, to select a few fair samples of the thousand-and-one scientific riddles, and to discuss them a little so that they suggest others—and others—to the increase of the interest and efficiency of our life." Preface

"The lucidity of treatment, the scientific caution, and the fine spirit in forming the whole are still there, and the interest, though scattered over a wide field, never flags. The scattering, by the way, make one wish for an index more worthy of the book." Times (London) lit. sup.

"The author tells the story of science as a continuous development. His thesis is 'That the sciences did not arise and could not have arisen simultaneously, that they form a well defined structure with mathematics at the bottom.' Psychology and social science he regards as still in process of evolution. Should help fill the need for a popularized history of science." Wis. bul.

First edition published 1917. "In comparison with the original volume, the space devoted here to mathematical science has been considerably reduced. . . This has made possible more adequate treatment of certain other fields." Preface

"Addressed to the student and the general reader this volume goes back to the origin of scientific knowledge, and of the scientific method which has not only revolutionized scientific study but has been widely applied to all kinds of human activity. The writers begin with the ancient Babylonians, Assyrians, Egyptians and Phoenicians whose monuments and inscriptions have furnished the material for the beginnings of scientific study. The development of the science of mathematics, astronomy and medicine and the contribution made by different nations occupies nine chapters. The second half of the text starts with the quickening influences of the age of discovery at the end of the fifteenth and the beginning of the sixteenth century and traces the progress of modern national, physical and mathematical science to the beginning of the twentieth century." Business arithmetic. Ginn 1923 410p illus $1.48 511

1 Arithmetic, Commercial 23-14942

Real situations motivate this text. The first four chapters test the pupil's ability in calculation. The following chapters provide practice in calculation combined with drill in analyzing arithmetical problems in typical business situations

Schlauch, William Storb, 1873- and Lang, Theodore

Mathematics of business and finance. Ronald 1937 548p illus $4.25, with exercises $4.75 511

1 Arithmetic, Commercial 2 Business 3 Finance 4 Mathematics 37-32399

A handbook providing methods for solving particular problems and explanations of their use. Partial contents: Short-cuts of computation; Percentage; Mark-up and selling factor; Simple interest; Bank discount; Compound interest; Domestic and foreign exchange; Annuities; Business graphs; Building and loan association calculations; Industrial loans; Capitalized cost; Obsolescence and replacement of capitalized assets; Valuation of depleting assets and leaseholds; Bond problems

‡ Arithmetic for the practical man. Van Nostrand 1931 269p illus (Mathematics for self study) $2 511

1 Arithmetic 31-14168

One of a series written "for the reader with an interest in the meaning and simpler technique of mathematical science, and for those who wish to obtain a practical mastery of some of the more usual and directly useful branches but who must work without the aid of an instructor." Author

Van Tuyl, George Henry, 1874-

Practical arithmetic, enlarged course. Am. bk. 1932 455,xxivp illus $1.32 511

1 Arithmetic 32-12614

Based on his "New complete business arithmetic." "No attempt has been made to make Practical Arithmetic a compendium of general business practice. On the other hand, an effort has been made so to present the subject of business arithmetic that those using the text shall be able to gain therefrom a knowledge of the principles governing business calculations, together with a reasonable degree of skill in the use of such principles." Preface

Wentworth, George, and Smith, David Eugene, 1860-

* Complete arithmetic. Ginn 1909 474p illus (Wentworth-Smith mathematical ser.) $1.16 511

1 Arithmetic 9-9643

"The book covers all of the topics ordinarily studied after a primary arithmetic has been completed, omitting such subjects as have become obsolete or are too technical for general study. Under each topic there are found an unusually large number of well-graded examples, and at frequent intervals collections of problems without numbers have been inserted as exercises in terse mathematical statement. . . . A few recreations are also given, that the lighter side of arithmetic may be seen along with its more serious aspect." Preface

512 ALGEBRA

There are many good texts in algebra but the average small library will probably not need more than one

In addition to the title listed in this class the following are recommended:

Hawkes, H. E., Luby, W. A. and Touton, F. C. New complete school algebra. Ginn 1926 625p illus $1.72

Milne, W. J. and Downey, W. F. Milne-Downey standard algebra. new ed Am. bk. 1924 496p illus $1.48, key $1.28

Rouse, L. J. College algebra. 2d ed Wiley 1939 462p illus $2.25 Contains answers

Dickson, Leonard Eugene, 1874-

Modern elementary theory of numbers. Univ. of Chicago press 1939 309p $3 512

1 Numbers, Theory of 39-31899

"Comprises a beginner's course with 200 problems; also a supplementary course with 120 additional problems covering as simply as possible some interesting and important topics of modern number theory. Integral calculus is used in only one small section of the book." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Uspensky, James Victor, 1883- and Heaslet, Maxwell Alfred, 1907-Elementary number theory. McGraw 1939 484p illus $4 512
1 Numbers, Theory of 39-31019
"Although many excellent books on number theory are available, there seems to be no one text that develops, in a systematic manner, the more elementary portions of the subject in a way adapted particularly for the classroom and the beginning student. The absence of such a book is keenly felt, inasmuch as the instruction in elementary number theory is given in an ever-increasing number of American universities and colleges. With this fact in mind the authors have endeavored to prepare a text carefully restricted to the elementary portions of the subject and yet containing things of sufficient interest to show to undergraduate students the reason for the enthusiasm with which the devotees of number theory approach the subject." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

1 Geometry, Descriptive 37-26270

"Presents the necessary principles involved in the solution of any engineering problem; they are presented in a logical order and are applied to practical problems. The special feature of the book, Chapter 10, 'Hip and Valley Angles for Roofs of Buildings,' is the connecting link of the fundamentals in the application to practical problems." Preface

Smith, William Griswold, 1869-
Practical descriptive geometry. 4th ed McGraw 1936 275p illus $2.50 515

1 Geometry, Descriptive 36-17518

A textbook first published 1912, and based on class room experience. The fourth edition "presents both the Q plane and the analytical methods, in greater detail than any previous edition. In addition, the assignments are more numerous, more varied, and greater in engineering interest than any offered heretofore." Preface

516 ANALYTIC GEOMETRY

Patterson, Boyd Crumrine, 1902-
Projective geometry. Wiley 1937 276p illus $3.50 516

1 Geometry, Projective 37-12735

A treatment of the elements of projective geometry. Contents: Introductory concepts; Principle of duality—simple and complete figures; Perspectivity—Desargues' theorem; Harmonic sets; Metric properties—double ratio; Projectively related primitive forms; Conics and cones; Pascal's theorem and Brianchon's theorem; Theory of pole and polar; Metric properties of conics; Ruled surfaces; Extended theory of projectivity; Theory of involution—metric properties; Imaginary elements; Foci and focal properties of conics; Planar collineations; Metric specializations; Special cases of Pascal's theorem

"This is a revision of Young's 'Manual of Astronomy,' and hails from Princeton University Observatory. It is fuller, however, than the now out-of-date 'Manual.' The authors do not employ the calculus, and an elementary student could master a great deal of the contents here so admirably arranged. The illustrations are profuse and beautiful. There is a great deal of disputable matter in these volumes, especially Chapter xxvi, which deals with star evolution and may, at any time, have to be scrapped. Men, mirrors and stars. rev ed Funk 1939 341p illus $3 522.2

1 Astronomy 2 Telescope 39-10845

First published 1935. The revised edition brings the material up to date, amplifies some passages and deals in more detail with the 200-inch telescope

"The book opens with a brief survey of the universe of stars and the fascination which it has held for investigators of all time, until the reader instinctively asks how we have learned so much about it. This question the remainder of the book answers. . . The book is profusely illustrated and merits a place on the shelves of every devotee of science, whether a professional, amateur, or general reader interested in the world's progress." (W) 39-27835

The story of the planning and building of the giant 200-inch telescope of Palomar mountain, California. "Not only is this book a record of [Dr George Ellery Hale's] devotion to a great ideal but . . . it recounts the erection of the Yerkes and Mt. Wilson Observatories and gives appreciative glimpses of the men who wrought so valiantly for their completion. Continuing, it starts its major theme—the events which led to the final triumph on the top of an isolated mountain in California." Springfield Republican

523 DESCRIPTIVE ASTRONOMY

Eddington, Sir Arthur Stanley, 1882-
Expanding universe. Macmillan 1933 182p illus $2.50 523.1

1 Nebulae 2 Universe 33-5593

"An expanded version of a public lecture delivered at the meeting of the International Astronomical Union at Cambridge (Mass.) in September, 1932. . . Deals with the view now tentatively held that the whole material universe of stars and galaxies of stars is dispersing, the galaxies scattering apart so as to occupy an ever increasing volume." Preface

523.2 Solar system

Russell, Henry Norris, 1877-
Solar system and its origin. Macmillan 1935 144p illus $2 523.2

1 Solar system 35-18783

"In three chapters first delivered as lectures in 1934, the professor of astronomy at Princeton discusses the origin of the solar system. In the chapter on The dynamical properties of the system, he describes the isolation in space of our system and its complexity; in Physical and chemical properties of the system, he discusses what is known of the nature and composition of the several bodies; and the final chapter deals specifically with theories concerning the origin of the solar system." Book rev. digest

"Authentic and delightful account of the present status of knowledge concerning our solar system." Pratt quarterly

Serviss, Garrett Putnam, 1851-1929
Story of the moon; a description of the scenery of the lunar world as it would appear to a visitor spending a month on the moon. . . Appleton-Century 1928 247p illus $3 523.3

1 Moon 28-17984

First published in 1907 under title: The moon

"Really a story, but a true one, told by the author to an imaginary friend. The four chapters are on the four phases of the moon and one who reads it will never look at the full moon again without trying to trace the craters, mountains and plains so graphically described. Remarkable photographs from pictures taken at the Yerkes observatory." Wis. bul.

523.5 Meteors

Enough information on meteors for ordinary purposes can usually be had from the general astronomies. If a brief account is needed the following is recommended:

Lucas, F. A. Meteorites, meteors and shooting stars. 2d ed Am. museum of natural hist. 1931 23p illus (American museum of natural history. Guide leaflet ser.) pa 15c

Olivier, Charles Pollard, 1884-
Comets. Williams & Wilkins 1930 246p illus $2.50 523.6

1 Comets 30-23918

"The magnitude, mass, movement and return of these once terrifying visitors are explained simply, clearly and without mathematics. If the author has lessened their mystery, he has increased their interest. Several famous comets are discussed in some detail." Amer. assn. for the advancement of science

Proctor, Mary
Romance of comets. Harper 1926 210p illus o.p. 1939 523.6

1 Comets 2 Meteors 26-14004

"Miss Proctor, an astronomer and daughter of an astronomer, knows as much about comets as anybody. Nobody knows much. She tells of the superstitions concerning comets, about the sport of hunting them, and how to make out time-tables for them. 'The Romance of Comets' tells, in popular style and short space, nearly all that one needs to know about these 'strange wanderers of the heavens.'" Outlook

523.7 Sun. Eclipses

In addition to the titles entered in this class, the following are recommended:

Abetti, Giorgio. The sun. Van Nostrand 1938 360p illus $5 An authoritative work for the advanced student on the physics of the outer layers of the sun, and on the spots and markings on the surface of the sun

Abbot, Charles Greeley, 1872-

The sun . . . 2d ed Appleton-Century 1929 xxvi,433p illus $3.50 523.7

1 Sun 29-1821

"Revised to include developments since the publication of the first edition (1911). While not strictly of a 'popular' nature there is much to interest the general reader. There are chapters on the influence of the sun on plant life; utilization of solar energy; and the relation of the sun to other stars. Numerous illustrations and tables." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"To the astronomical reader, Dr. Abbot's book is a standard work of reference, containing a number of useful tables, and also first-hand information on the measurement of the solar-constant of radiation—a work long associated with the name of the author and the Smithsonian Institution. It is therefore thought to be a regrettable omission that this revised edition does not include a table of collected results of measures of the solar-constant. . . But Dr. Abbot has renewed, by this timely second edition, the usefulness of his very readable book." Nature

Mitchell, Samuel Alfred, 1874-

Eclipses of the sun. 4th ed rev and enl Columbia univ. press 1935 520p illus maps $5 523.7

1 Eclipses 35-24296

First edition 1923. The fourth edition adds to the third edition, published 1932, a chapter giving the results obtained from the 1932 and 1934 eclipses and some new illustrations

"Describes some of the wonders of modern astronomy in language that, without sacrificing scientific accuracy, is not too technical for the average reader and senior high school or junior college student. Of especial interest are the chapters telling of early historical eclipses, Chinese, Babylonian, Egyptian, Biblical and classical, followed by a discussion of the spectroscope and an account of modern eclipses and entertaining personal experiences in Spain and elsewhere, and an intelligible account of the structure of the atom and the Einstein theory." Bkl.

"Both the trained astronomer and the ordinary citizen in search of instruction not tiresome will find this book suitable for his library." Literary rev.

Proctor, Mary

1 Sun 27-23999

"Popular work dealing with methods for determining the sun's distance from the earth, the constitution of the sun and its atmosphere, and eclipses. In the latter connection there are interesting personal experiences of the author and others." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"The principal function of Miss Proctor's book is to show how the spectroscope has been developed, so that we now have marvellous instruments by which the sun, in all its fiery eccentricities, may be photographed, and so measured and named in its constituent elements. The amateur should find the book very useful." Spectator

523.8 Stars

In addition to the titles listed in this class the following are recommended:

King, E. S. Pathfinder star maps. Cosmos press 1926 xii maps $1.25

Olcott, W. T. Star lore of all ages; a collection of myths, legends, and facts concerning the constellations of the northern hemisphere. Putnam 1911 xxii,453p illus $5

1 Astronomy 2 Stars—Atlases [26-4674]

"After an interval of fifteen years since the publication of the third edition, this book now appears rehabilitated under Mr. Phillips' able revision. To the usual planetary diagrams, numerous lunar and stellar charts, drawings of planets and comets, a number of photographs have been added to represent the work of modern astronomical photography, together with a concise summary of such topics as methods of measuring the distances of the stars, the classification of stellar spectra, and new information on variable stars. . . It can be said with confidence that everyone interested in astronomy, whether possessing a telescope or not, will be well equipped with this popular guide." Nature

1 Stars 35-27103

First published 1928. The second edition is slightly revised to bring it up to date

"A book of a size to admit charts large enough to show plainly the positions of the constellations and their important stars at any hour and in any month. There is a chart for each month, besides two giving the southern constellations, with concise directions for their use and clear descriptions of each star and constellation, the Milky Way and other wonders of the sky." Boston Transcript

"Although it is not intended to be a textbook, and treats each topic only briefly, still the text does contain much accurate astronomical information as well as the essential facts about the various astronomical bodies. All astronomical terms are clearly and simply defined, so that even the beginner will have no trouble in understanding the meanings. Furthermore, the definitions are well arranged, and the book contains such a complete index that it should prove to be a very satisfactory reference book for many purposes." Science

"A guide to the observation and study of the stars, including directions for making many instruments, from a quadrant to a reflecting telescope. Description of the constellations, instructions for finding them with the naked eye, the opera glass, or the telescope, and biographical sketches of famous astronomers. Illustrated with photographs, charts, and drawings. Useful for students and instructors, scout groups, camp counselors, and hobbyists." Bkl.

Eddington, Sir Arthur Stanley, 1882-

Stars and atoms. Yale univ. press 1927 127p illus $2 523.8

1 Atoms 2 Stars 27-15694

" 'Stars and atoms' was the title of an evening lecture given by Professor Eddington at the meeting of the British association in Oxford in August, 1926. The discourse, which aroused great interest and comment, has been expanded into three lectures. He deals with some interesting developments in astronomy to which our advancing knowledge of atoms and radiation has led." Book rev. digest

"The modern theory of the stars and the way it fits in with and makes use of the modern theory of the atom is a fascinating story, however told. But Prof. Eddington tells it with full vigour of a powerful and gifted imagination." Nature

A third edition was published 1929. The changes in the 4th edition affect the main part of the book but little, but some revision has been made in the "Observer's catalogue" and in the tables and text of chapter 8. Bibliography: p148-51

"Author's purpose is to present a popular guide 'with astronomy left out.' The practical advice on selection and use of instruments and the simplicity of the star maps make this one of the best books available for the novice." Pittsburgh

E. G. Murphy's "Beginner's guide to the stars" (Putnam 1924 86p illus $1.25) is a condensation and rearrangement of "A beginner's star book," with the most elaborate features omitted. It is a good practical guide to the stars

"The arrangement of this book provides a systematic method of learning the constellations, giving 12 evenings to the task. The charts are unusually good, but the fact that they are planned for England will call for some readjustment in the time tables. For this reason it will not be the best first book for small libraries." Wis. bul.

"Much interesting information as to the origin of the constellation groups and the names of the bright stars adds greatly to the attractiveness of the book." Times (London) lit. sup.

1 Astronomy 2 Stars 8-14345

"This book by means of star-charts is intended to acquaint the casual observer with the appearance of the constellations, as viewed with the naked eye, with their histories and mythologies, and with the stories of their chief stars and star groups. The constellations are studied according to the months during which they approach the meridian, the north and south line of the sky. A separate chapter is given to the study of the planets." 1 Latitude 2 Longitude 3 Man—Influence of environment 35-4273

"This book has evolved out of the need that has arisen in the author's teaching experience for a non-technical presentation of the significance of the geometric location of the places on the surface of the earth. Its aim is two-fold: namely, (1) to indicate some of the geographical applications that may be made of the latitudinal and longitudinal position of a particular place, and (2) to provide a simple technique for the computation of the data relating to such position that may be used geographically." Preface

"The presentation of the material on the whole is good, particularly in the way a subject is introduced by presenting first a pertinent statement from some newspaper or other report. The illustrations are clear." Geographical review

An excellent manual. "It has been the authors' chief purpose to produce a textbook which shall include the essentials of a comprehensive knowledge of practical surveying and at the same time be adapted to the use of teachers and students in technical schools. . . Considerable stress is laid upon the practical side of surveying. The attempt is made not only to give the student a thorough training in the fundamental principles and in approved methods of surveying, computing, and plotting, but also to impress upon him the importance of accuracy and precision in all of his work in the field and the drafting-room." "Dr. Bowditch . . . did more than any other person to combat the guesswork of the 'old' navigation and to place navigation on a scientific foundation in the United States. His book, first published over a hundred years ago, stood for decades as the best book on the subject. Although it has been completely revised many times to meet the needs of changing conditions, his name has been retained as the author of the standard American work on navigation. It is invaluable as a reference book." Alfred E. Burton

"It is as authoritative and up-to-date as any book dealing with so virile a science could possibly be. Its story is told in simple, straight-forward style, and with interesting explanations of many every-day experiences. . . The illustrations in this book are remarkable in number and type . . . A stereoscopic lens with which to view the photographs is furnished by the publishers with the attractively boxed volume." Scientific book club review

"Physics is here presented pictorially and with simple text, using such everyday applications as are easily recognized by boys and girls. 'Old fashioned' equations and formulas are replaced by the 'graformula,' which enables the pupil to find any desired value by merely covering the factor wanted. There are many problems and test questions." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

In the 1938 edition, revisions in physical theories of a very fundamental nature have been made because of new discoveries in such subjects as neutrons, electrons, radiation. Practical applications of physical laws in air conditioning, aviation, sound pictures, wire-photo transmissions, etc have also brought about many changes in the text. Many added illustrations. For college freshmen

"The book is written in an exceedingly clear style and is so well illustrated that anyone earnestly desiring to improve in an elementary way his or her knowledge of the whole field of physics will find its perusal a source of interest and pleasure." Journal of the Franklin institute

"In this third edition [of a book published in a second edition in 1932] the general plan of the first book has been retained, but many changes and additions have been made. . . Important changes will be found in the chapters on electrical devices, illumination, and radio. Six new chapters added are: protection against fire; air conditioning; electricity in everyday life; visual aids; the camera and photography; and solutions and other dispersions." Foreword

"The method is almost entirely instructional as distinct from educational, and every device used in the home, from electric lamps to 'talking picture' projection, and from carpet sweepers to twelve-cylinder motor cars, that depends in any way upon physics, is fully described. . . The illustrations are numerous and excellent, and the subject matter is dealt with in a very interesting way." Nature

"Contains the substance of the Tarner Lectures delivered at Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1938. Sir Arthur reviews the principles of philosophic thought associated with the modern advances of physical science. To make sure of our scientific foundations, the author has entered rather deeply into the principles of relativity theory and quantum theory. . . The first eight chapters are concerned with the philosophic concept of selective subjectivism and the remainder with structuralism . . . The last two chapters outline a general philosophical outlook for scientists." Industrial arts index

Easy lessons in Einstein; a discussion of the more intelligible features of the theory of relativity; with an article by Albert Einstein and a bibliography. Harcourt 1920 123p illus o.p. 1939 530.1

1 Einstein, Albert, 1879- 2 Relativity (Physics) 20-8295

"Dr Slosson . . . has attempted a simple explanation of the Einstein theories, making use of 'such crude and absurd analogies as trains and elevators and projectiles flying through space and Coney island mirrors.' A paper by Dr Einstein on Time, space, and gravitation is reprinted from the London Times, and there is a bibliography of eight pages and an index. Parts of the book have appeared in the Independent." Book rev. digest

"Slosson's 'Easy lessons in Einstein' is a good attempt written in an easy style far above the breezy smartness of the Sunday supplements; it is trustworthy and throughout entertaining, if not always instructive. There is perhaps too much about the fourth dimension and somewhat too much striving to 'loosen up,' as he puts it, 'our conventional ideas of the fixity of time and space.'" Freeman

An accurate and readable book for the layman which covers: Newton and the colours of the spectrum; Nature of light; Invisible rays; Applications to the structure of atoms and stars; Primary colours; Colour blindness; Colour photography and stereoscopy; Light of the future; Photochemistry and allied effects; Phototherapy; Psychology of colour
"But while the book is primarily addressed to amateurs, I hope at the same time it will be of interest and value to the serious student of the subject." Preface

Treatise on light. . . [7th ed] Longmans 1938 528p illus $4.50 535
1 Light 39-14551
"First published 1915, this textbook has run through six editions and several reprintings. For the present (7th) edition it has been entirely reset, new diagrams and illustrations have been introduced, and extensive revisions made. Discussion of photoelectric effects and a chapter on the quantum theory are among the more important additions. Answers to the numerous problems are included for the first time. As the work is intended for university students who have completed a first year course of physics, some calculus has been used, although the author states that it is not absolutely essential." Luckiesh, Matthew, 1883-
Color and colors. Van Nostrand 1938 206p front $3 535.6

1 Color 2 Colors (W) 38-33537

"From the experiences and opportunities arising during a life-long interest in various realms of color and colors I have written with some attempt at orderliness. The manner of presentation aims primarily to reveal the breadth and depth of the subject and secondarily to coordinate helpful details." Foreword

Color and its applications. . . 2d ed enl Van Nostrand 1921 419p illus o.p. 1939 535.6

1 Color 21-5168

"Authoritative work on the science of color, with special reference to applications, including color mixture, color vision, color photography, color in lighting, in painting, and in stage and display effects. Embodies results of author's own valuable research work." Pittsburgh

"A very useful general treatise on colour which includes 130 well-selected diagrams, curves, and tables, so that for very many purposes the book will be found sufficient in itself. But at the end of every section references are given to other text-books and to original papers to facilitate a more extended study." Nature

Matthew Luckiesh's "Language of color" (Dodd 1918 282p $2.50) is a psychological and historical treatment of color which attempts to calculate the effect of color in arousing emotions and in portraying ideas

1 Heat—Transmission 2 Hydrodynamics 3 Thermodynamics 38-20626

"The contents of this book include subject matter which is fundamental in the training of all engineers. . . The purposes of the course outlined by this material are to review thermodynamics, introduce dimensional-analysis, fluid-flow, and heat-transmission problems, and to combine this material into one continuing study, as are actual engineering problems. . . The book presupposes an elementary knowledge of thermodynamics and hydraulics, though it includes a brief review of these subjects." Preface

1 Thermodynamics 37-2041

First published 1921. Since the 3d edition, 1932, new material on water vapor refrigeration and on the steam-air mixture has been added, because these subjects are basic to the science of air conditioning. The section on the energy laws of thermodynamics has been changed considerably and 42 new problems added. The size of the book remains the same

537 ELECTRICITY

Books on practical applications of electricity, e.g. electric engineering, radio, telephone, etc. are classified 621.3 and subdivisions

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

Jackson, D. C. and Jackson, J. P. Elementary book on electricity and magnetism and their applications; rev and enl by N. H. Black. Macmillan 1919 598p illus $2.40

Starling, S. G. Electricity and magnetism for advanced students. 6th ed Longmans 1937 630p illus $4 Up-to-date textbook for advanced students

Thomas, E. H. Electricity for beginners; an elementary work on electricity written in non-technical language for the beginner. 2d rev and enl ed Henley 1930 xxiv,172p illus $1.50

Zeleny, Anthony. Elements of electricity. 2d ed McGraw 1935 xxvi,526p illus $3.50

Bragg, William Lawrence, 1890-

‡ Electricity. Macmillan 1936 272p illus $4 537

1 Electricity 36-31762

"Consists of six lectures 'adapted to a juvenile auditory' given at the request of the Royal Institution. In the American edition the expressions conform to American usage, or an explanation is given in a note. The first three chapters are devoted to the behavior of electric charges, currents, and magnets, and to fundamental apparatus such as cells, motors, and dynamos. The last three deal with electric apparatus in every day use such as power stations, the telephone, telegraph, and radio. Many diagrams and photographs." Industrial arts index

Esty, William, 1868-1928; Millikan, Robert Andrews, 1868- and McDougal, Wynne L.

* Elements of electricity; a practical discussion of the fundamental laws and phenomena of electricity and their practical applications in the business and industrial world. Am. tech. soc. 1937 248p illus $2 537

1 Electricity 37-2341

"Third edition of a beginner's book by well-known experts, using the simplest mathematics and illustrated by 253 pen-and-ink drawings. Covers magnetism, currents and circuits, Ohm's law, electric bells and signal systems, induced currents, transformer construction, and storage batteries." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"The authors are men who are daily teaching electricity to students in class rooms, but the arrangement and simplicity of the text is such that the book may be easily understood by engineers and students studying at home." Power plant engineering

Greenwood, Ernest, 1883-

Amber to amperes; the story of electricity. Harper 1931 332p illus o.p. 1939 537

1 Electricity—History 31-2449

"The story of electricity in its relation to the social and historical background of its development. Thales, the Greek philosopher, in 600 B. C., studying amber and wondering why it attracted other substances when rubbed, is Mr. Greenwood's starting point, and he ends with Dr. George W. Crile of our own day wondering if that same property of amber created and constructed the living organism." N.Y. Times

"A welcome influence to poetize prosaic electricity. . . The book is a mine of information, from which the engineer can enliven his thinking, his speaking, and his literary efforts." Elec. world

Bibliography: p319-21

Loeb, Leonard Benedict, 1891-

* Fundamentals of electricity and magnetism. 2d ed Wiley 1938 xxiv,554p illus $4 537

1 Electricity 2 Electromagnetism 3 Magnetism 38-23708

"Drastic revision and enlargement by 122 pages bring this college text, last published 1931, strictly up to date. Dr. Loeb . . . does not shirk the use of the calculus in his endeavor to present the subject in a quantitative and mathematical fashion. The work is well diagramed and there are more than 300 practical problems offered for solution." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"A rather difficult and complicated problem faced the author of this book when he set out to produce a text and reference work incorporating the fundamentals of electricity and magnetism in a quantitative treatment. How well the author succeeded can be seen upon examination of this book." Journal of the Franklin Institute

Miller, Dayton Clarence, 1866-

Sparks, lightning, cosmic rays; an anecdotal history of electricity. . . Macmillan 1939 192p illus $2.50 537

1 Electricity—History 2 Franklin, Benjamin, 1706-1790 (W) 39-27499

Based on Franklin institute lectures for young people. "The first lecture gave the history of electricity from its first recognition by the Greek philosophers to the time of Franklin, the middle of the eighteenth century. The second lecture described Franklin's experiments, culminating in the famous kite experiment, and set forth his philosophical contributions. The third lecture continued the account of the development of the science of electricity to the present when it is manifested in radio, the aurora polaris and cosmic rays." Preface

Morgan, Alfred Powell, 1889-

Pageant of electricity. Appleton-Century 1939 xxvi,363p illus $3.50 537

1 Electricity—History (W) 39-27992

Static and dynamic electricity. McGraw 1939 560p (Int. ser. in physics) $6 537

1 Electrodynamics 2 Electrostatics 39-22705

"This work is for the graduate student who, although 'familiar with advanced electrical theory, is unable to solve the electrical problems he encounters in research if they fall outside the routine types and so must be worked out from first principles.' The reader is supposed to have a reasonable familiarity with vector analysis, the calculus, and elementary differential equations. Any mathematical considerations beyond this point are developed by the author. There are numerous worked-out problems as well as 533 others offered

Electricity and magnetism; an introduction to the mathematical theory. McGraw 1939 221p illus (Electrical engineering texts) $3 537

1 Electricity 2 Magnetism 39-22014

"It is intended for fourth-year undergraduate students in physics and electrical engineering. The basis of the interpretation of electrical phenomena is their manifestation and measurement in terms of the Newtonian mechanics. The sequence of subject is in approximate chronological order following the classical development of electric and magnetic discovery and science. . . The electron theory of matter is introduced at all points to the extent that it offers an explanation of the physical phenomena involved." Preface

"To condense so much into little more than two hundred pages is a noteworthy feat, and the author is to be congratulated on his presentation of the subject." Nature

1 Chemistry 2 Cookery 37-22761

"In the second edition . . . the material . . . has been almost entirely rewritten in order to keep pace with the progress of investigators. . . The large amount of work that has been done in experimental cookery has necessitated many changes in the chapters dealing with foods, the material on egg and meat cookery in particular having been entirely revised. In response to many requests we have added reading references at the end of each chapter." Preface to second edition
"A textbook of general chemistry for college students of home economics, including a practical laboratory manual with problems relating to cookery." Cleveland

1 Chemistry—Bibliography 2 Reference books (W) 38-24150

"A guide to the use of keys and summaries and is written from the chemist's rather than the librarians' viewpoint. Beginning with the arrangement of a library and its directories, the author proceeds to sources of biographical data; periodicals and the reading of original reports; summaries and abstracts; review and monograph series; dictionaries and encyclopedias; textbooks; patent literature and government publications; report writing and the filing of notes. In the bibliographies, the following types of books are omitted: elementary general textbooks, those printed since January, 1937, and those in languages other than English, French and German." The use of this book and the similar German-English one listed below will depend largely on how many foreign periodicals and reference books the library has. Some libraries will not need either of these books

"A helpful work, for which there is a distinct need. It contains nearly 400 pages of dictionary matter, embracing most terms in ordinary use. Apart from words of exact chemical significance, most lay terms accessory to technical expressions are included." Chemical trade journal and chemical engineer

1 Chemistry—Dictionaries 2 German language—Dictionaries 35-2055

"A great number of new scientific terms has been added in the new edition of this excellent dictionary, such as a glossary of terms relating to atomic structure, bringing the total number of entries up to about 42,000. Most users will probably react favorably to the change to the paragraph style for entries beginning with the same word element, whereby much space has been conserved." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

"The scope of the book is broader than the title would seem to indicate. It gives English meanings, not only of German words occurring in the literature of general and industrial chemistry, but includes words used in scientific and technical German literature generally, as well as a good German vocabulary. Very useful to anyone who has occasion to read German scientific or technical books or periodicals." Donald Hendry

1 Chemistry—History 2 Chemists 31-28021

"Dr. Holmyard's 'Makers of Chemistry' is something more than a series of biographical sketches of eminent chemists. . . The book is, indeed, a history of 'the noble science'; further, it is decidedly the best and brightest of the short histories of chemistry with which the present reviewer is acquainted. . . The presentation of the chemical story is enhanced by the author's knack of providing it at intervals with a thumb-nail suggestion of its general historical setting. There is a wealth of illustrations, admirably selected and reproduced. The text, moreover, abounds in quotations from original sources." Nature

1 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 37-2344

First published 1927. Revised in the light of recent changes and research discoveries. Chapters have been enlarged, rearranged and new material has been added
"This text not only presents a well-reasoned treatment of the main elements of classical physical chemistry but, as it seems to the reviewer, offers the best handle, among the list of available introductory textbooks of physical chemistry, by which the student may take hold of the newer developments in the field." Journal of physical chemistry

Walker, Sir James, 1863-1935
Introduction to physical chemistry. 10th ed Macmillan 1927 446p illus $5 541
1 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical [22-20980]

"Room has been found in the present revised edition for the incorporation of new material, and for the presentation of certain newer points of view and newer methods of treatment, without the volume being augmented in size." Preface to the tenth edition
"It need only be said that the salient features of the new knowledge are expounded with admirable clearness, and if the reader has a grievance, it will probably be in the nature of a complaint that Professor Walker's account of these entrancing developments is all too brief. . . It not infrequently happens that a pioneer work of this character is superseded in the course of time by competitive treatises, but the care with which the successive editions have been revised is such that Walker's book may be said to stand almost alone in its class as an introductory exposition of the principles of physical chemistry." Chemical age

541.2 Atomic theory

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

Rutherford, E. R. 1st baron. Newer alchemy. . . Macmillan 1937 67p illus $1.50

Underhill, C. R. Electrons at work; a simple and general treatise on electronic devices, their circuits, and industrial uses. McGraw 1933 354p illus $3

Hudson, Ralph Gorton, 1885-
Electronics. Wiley 1932 135p illus $2 541.2
1 Electrons 32-21779

"An excellent book of its type. An attempt to explain to the general reader the electron theory and some of its known applications. It presupposes 'a general knowledge of elementary physics, especially electricity,' on the part of the reader." Donald Hendry

Millikan, Robert Andrews, 1868-
Electrons (+ and —), protons, photons, neutrons and cosmic rays. Univ. of Chicago press 1935 492p illus (Univ. of Chicago science ser.) $3.50 541.2
1 Atoms 2 Cosmic rays 3 Electrons 35-1781

"This book is more than a revision of Professor Millikan's well-known book 'The Electron.' This is incorporated practically unchanged in the first ten chapters of the present work, but six new chapters are added dealing with the wave nature of the electron, the spinning electron, the positron, the neutron, transmutation of the elements and cosmic rays. Throughout the experiments of Professor Millikan and his colleagues are emphasized." Scientific book club review

Russell, Bertrand Arthur William Russell, 3d earl, 1872-
A B C of atoms. Dutton 1923 162p illus $2 541.2
1 Atoms 23-15056

"A very clearly written summary of recent knowledge regarding the constitution of matter. The style is so simple that the book may be intelligently read by those without previous knowledge of physical science." Pittsburgh
"Mr. Russell's little book is a masterpiece of lucid exposition. It is written for the layman and demands practically no previous knowledge of the subject, yet it is the kind of book which may be read with profit by persons of every degree of knowledge of modern physics and chemistry." New statesman

Wilson, Harold Albert, 1874-
Mysteries of the atom. Van Nostrand 1934 146p illus $2.50 541.2
1 Atoms 34-27140

"The greater part of the book is devoted to the new ideas about ultimate particles or the microscopic structure of the universe, but the last three chapters deal also with large scale phenomena for which the new conceptions of time and space are necessary. The theory of some of the experiments described was considered too technical for inclusion in the body of the book, but is given in appendices at the end. These appendices may be omitted by readers who have little or no scientific training." Preface

Yates, Raymond Francis, 1895-
* These amazing electrons. . . Macmillan 1937 326p illus $3.75 541.2
1 Electrons (W) 37-30902

"In this popularized book on electronic control, the author describes new changes which have taken place in medicine, surgery, music and tonal variations, television, and industry as a result of electronic discoveries. He also visualizes excitedly a future revolutionized by successful electronic research." Bkl.

541.34 Colloids

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

Hartman, R. J. Colloid chemistry. Houghton 1939 xxviii,556p illus $4.75

Weiser, H. B. Inorganic colloid chemistry. Wiley 1933-38 3v v 1 $4.50, v2 $4.75, v3 $6 Contents: v 1 Colloidal elements, v2 Hydrous oxides, v3 Colloidal salts

Alexander, Jerome, 1876-
Colloid chemistry; principles and applications. 4th ed Van Nostrand 1937 505p illus $4.50 541.34
1 Colloids 37-11413

Since the third edition of 1929 "our knowledge of the physical foundations of matter has been extended to the point where a completely new treatment of the colloid state is in order. To accomplish this, the author has adopted a new approach to colloids, taking into account all relevant recent discoveries in nuclear and atomic physics, and welding the new to the well-known in a simple yet complete fashion. . . The book is in no sense a miscellany. Rather it is a carefully organized treatise on colloids, perfectly coherent around this one central theme." Chemical and metallurgical engineering
Bibliography: p455-60

First published 1921. Arrangement remains the same in this third edition, results of recent research are included and references to recent literature have been collected in a 35-page bibliography

"Reviews the present knowledge of adsorption, surface tension, Brownian movements, coalescence, preparation and properties of solutions. Later chapters deal with jellies and gelatinous precipitates, emulsions and foams, non-aqueous solutions, fog and smoke, gases and solids in solids, and the thickness of surface films." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Weiser, Harry Boyer, 1887-
Colloid chemistry (a textbook) Wiley 1939 428p illus $4 541.34
1 Colloids 39-21832

"This advanced textbook presupposes a knowledge of physical chemistry and is primarily intended for students specializing in chemistry or chemical engineering. The threefold purpose of the book is to lay the foundations of colloid chemistry, to formulate and correlate theories underlying colloidal behavior and finally, to illustrate the industrial applications of the subject." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

541.37 Electrochemistry

Creighton, Henry Jermain Maude, 1886- and Koehler, Walter Allos, 1893-

1 Electrochemistry 35-18067

Contents: v 1 Principles, by H. J. Creighton (3d ed); v2 Applications, by W. A. Koehler

The work is intended to be used as a textbook by students of chemistry and as a reference for chemical engineers and others interested in the subject. Problems accompany the chapters, and literature references are provided

Bibliographical footnotes and references at ends of most chapters

MacInnes, Duncan Arthur, 1885-
Principles of electrochemistry. Reinhold 1939 478p illus $6 541.37
1 Electrochemistry 39-3398

"Dr. MacInness, who is a prominent member of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, states that, considering the wide extent of his subject, he has severely restricted the range of topics and the manner of their presentation. His equations are derived from first principles and only the real accomplishments of theoretical electrochemistry are discussed, although he reluctantly omits the general theory of acids and bases. The most recent and dependable data are presented rather than those of earlier investigators. There are well-executed diagrams and adequate footnote references to the literature." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Thompson, Maurice de Kay, 1877-
Theoretical and applied electrochemistry. 3d ed Macmillan 1939 xxi,535p illus $5 541.37
1 Electrochemistry 39-13440

First published 1911, revised edition 1925. In the third edition "the book has been entirely rewritten in order to bring up to date. A number of new problems have been added and the solutions are given at the end, so that those who wish to study the subject alone can do so." Preface

"This single volume aims to give an account of the most important electrochemical industries, as well as the principal applications of electrochemistry in the laboratory. Both the theoretical and technical points of view are discussed and numerous references to the literature of each are cited. While the book purports to be a textbook, its contents, presuppose a greater knowledge in the fields of chemistry, physics and physical chemistry than the ordinary student would possess." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

1 Chemistry, Analytic 2 Rocks—Analysis 29-19421

"This volume of over 900 pages, by chemists of the United States Bureau of Standards, stresses the careful preparation of the solution for the determination that is to be made. Part I deals with apparatus and reagents, common and special operations, and the methods of volumetric analysis. Part II treats of the determination of the elements, the analysis of silicate rocks, carbonate rocks, soda lime glass, and minerals of high alumina content." N.Y. public lib. New technical books
"No one in this country, perhaps in the world, was better qualified to write such a volume than the distinguished senior author with his great analytical experience. His death in 1925 interrupted the work which has now been finished in a most competent manner by the junior author." American journal of science

"According to the preface, the system presented in this sophomore text is the result of an experimental investigation of ten years' duration, to provide not only reliable and sensitive qualitative information in regard to the constituents present in the material being analyzed but also sufficient quantitative information to eliminate in many cases the need for further quantitative determinations. After giving the method for the separation of the various constituents, methods (largely volumetric) for estimating the amount of each are provided. Considerable experimental data are presented to show the effectiveness and limitations of the methods. A suggested course for one year is outlined in the appendix. Questions, problems, tables." The emphasis is laid upon theory rather than technique of procedure, each section of the book being divided into four main parts: theory, apparatus, the sample, and the desired constituent. Problems with answers at end of some chapters. Graphic logarithm table." Book rev. digest

"The material in this book is well chosen and is very much up-to-date. The list of determinations for which directions are given is much greater than that found in the usual textbook and in addition the appendix contains a valuable collection of references where other suitable laboratory exercises may be found." American chemical society. Journal

546 INORGANIC CHEMISTRY

Two comprehensive treatises which will be useful in larger or special libraries are:

Friend, J. A. N. ed. Text-book of inorganic chemistry. Lippincott 1914-39 22v ea $10 to $20

Mellor, J. W. Comprehensive treatise on inorganic and theoretical chemistry. Longmans 1922-37 16v ea $20

Foster, William, 1869-

Inorganic chemistry for colleges; a textbook for students who have had a preparatory course in chemistry. Van Nostrand 1936 925p illus $3.90 546

1 Chemistry, Inorganic 36-12954

First published 1929. "An entire chapter in this new edition is devoted to the subject of atomic structure. Outstanding among its contents are a modified Bohr-Thomsen Periodic Table, the electron theory of valence, the main facts concerning heavy hydrogen, a discussion of the transmutation of the elements, and a brief statement of the quantum theory. The chapters on ionization have been modernized, and the new definitions of acid and base are given." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

"An excellent textbook, clear, comprehensive, attractively printed. . . Valuable features are unusually full lists of exercises, reading references and problems. The author gives more than he promises to in his title, for he includes in his 'Inorganic chemistry' seventy pages on carbon compounds with useful information about the foods of animals and plants." Science news-letter

First published 1929. The revised edition brings up to date such topics as thermodynamics, developments in atomic, molecular and crystal structure, atomic sizes, bond distances and bond energies, and chemical industries

"Essential chemical facts are presented concisely and in due relation to other facts and principles in such a way as to prove useful not only to college freshmen but to advanced students, teachers and industrial chemists. Includes a glossary and numerous tables." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Mellor, Joseph William, 1873-1938

Elementary inorganic chemistry. Longmans 1930 229p illus $1.50 546

1 Chemistry, Inorganic 30-17416

A textbook somewhat more advanced and yet more compact in form than the author's earlier "Introduction to modern inorganic chemistry"

"The present little work for beginners presents essentials in a clear, simple manner with numerous illustrations and interesting references to the men who have deveoped the science. At the chapter endings are questions 'to make the reader think.'" N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Mellor's modern inorganic chemistry rev. and ed. by G. D. Parkes in collaboration with J. W. Mellor. . . Longmans 1939 915p illus $4.50 546

1 Chemistry, Inorganic

First published 1912. "Drastic revision and rearrangement have resulted in practically a new book. Although Dr. Mellor died (1938) before its publication he had assented to the new manuscript prepared by him and Dr. Parkes. In this edition particular care has been taken not to allow theory to over-balance fact." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"The presentation is excellent, and on account of the scope of the book it may be well used in a second course in general chemistry. Numerous modernized figures and careful discussions of present-day technical processes are well designed to convince the reader that chemistry is not a subject to be learned once and forgotten, but one to follow, if not as a profession, at least in its connection with today's world." American journal of science

Partington, James Riddick, 1886-

Text-book of inorganic chemistry for university students. 5th ed Macmillan 1937 1062p illus $4.50 546

1 Chemistry, Inorganic 38-3022

First published 1921. Besides minor alterations the main changes in subject matter deal with heavier isotopes of hydrogen, theory of indicators, thermochemistry, recent researches and technical advances, modern technical processes for nitrogen fixation, and structure of the silicates

1 Chemistry, Organic 30-13368

"This book is intended for the general reader who would like to know something of the manner in which organic chemistry grew and developed, and something of its contributions to the comforts and conveniences of modern life." Preface

"A fascinating story for the lay reader and for students not specializing in chemistry, but it will be equally interesting and useful to research chemists, research directors, and also to many college professors. The book could have been improved by a more liberal use of charts and tables." Industrial and engineering chemistry

First published 1924. In the 5th edition the specific changes are "the introduction of questions at the end of each chapter; the revision of the chapter on carbohydrates; the insertion of a page of models of organic molecules based upon the latest scientific information; and a fairly complete and thoroughly revised system of group and ring nomenclature at the end of the book. The chapter on enzymes, vitamins, and hormones has also been thoroughly revised. A table has been added indicating Latin and Greek derivations in chemical terminology. The list of reference books given at the end of the volume has been revised and brought up to date." Preface to the fifth edition

"Concise college text, presenting principles and important applications. Not intended as a laboratory manual but gives a brief outline for identification of organic compounds. Unique features are the glossary, the chapter on nomenclature, and the valuable charts on technology and uses of various products." Pittsburgh

1 Chemistry, Organic 2 Research 24-28865

This book, which will be valuable in libraries that serve the research worker, may not be needed in all small libraries

"A well written book on an important subject hitherto inadequately treated. Will be serviceable in a much more extended field than indicated by the title. It will be invaluable to research workers, and the discussion of laboratory and plant research should be suggestive to all chemists. Approximately one-third of the book is devoted to chemical literature, the use of libraries, and the writing of papers and reports. The information given on these latter topics should be of value to scientists and technical men in general." Pittsburgh Chemical literature: p60-90

Richter, George Holmes, 1904-
Textbook of organic chemistry. Wiley 1938 711p illus $4 547

1 Chemistry, Organic 38-17429

"This book is directed specifically to that large body of ambitious students who wish to study beginning organic chemistry and gain more than a superficial knowledge of the subject. To accomplish this end the material is so arranged that the emphasis falls on the fundamentals of the science, namely, nomenclature, synthesis, reactions, and properties. The descriptive material is limited to a minimum; such necessary information is usually presented in tables. The method of presentation . . . is designed to help the beginning student of organic chemistry to understand the subject." Preface

548 CRYSTALLOGRAPHY

E. S. Dana's "Text-book of mineralogy" (class 549) will be found to cover the field of crystallography sufficiently for most small libraries. If the library needs an entire book on the subject the one listed below is a good one

Barker, Thomas Vipond, 1881-1931
Study of crystals; a general introduction . . . Murby 1930 137p illus 8s 6d 548

1 Crystallography 31-4803

"An excellent introduction to geometrical, chemical and physical crystallography, because it is so clearly and simply written. It can be understood by anyone who has an elementary knowledge, and who wishes to acquaint himself with modern aspects of the subject, especially from the point of view of theory." Economic geology

Evans, Robert Crispin
Introduction to crystal chemistry. Macmillan 388p illus $4.50 548

1 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 2 Crystallography [39-21263]

"The title hardly does justice to a work which seeks to co-ordinate both the physical and the chemical properties of crystal structures with the four recognized types of interatomic bindings. A critical survey of authoritative data culled from a wide field provides the framework for a lucid account of fundamental principles; the Bohr atom in correlation with the periodic classification of the elements; the interatomic forces which stabilize specific atomic groupings; the lattice theory in relation to metals, alloy systems, ionic compounds (which include the silicates) and

the empirical, often dubious 'molecule'. . . Though numerous problems await solution, the volume of ascertained fact is impressive, and this exposition of it will commend itself strongly to students of mineralogy and petrology alike." Geological magazine

549 MINERALOGY

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

Dake, H. C.; Fleener, F. L. and Wilson, B. H. Quartz family minerals. McGraw 1938 304p illus $2.50 A recommended handbook for the amateur collector. Tells of the origin, structure, location etc. of agates, opals, jasper, geodes thunder eggs, petrified wood and other forms of quartz

English, G. L. comp. Descriptive list of the new minerals, 1892-1938, containing all new mineral names not mentioned in Dana's System of mineralogy, sixth edition, 1892. McGraw 1939 258p $3

Dana, Edward Salisbury, 1849-1935
Textbook of mineralogy with an extended treatise on crystallography and physical mineralogy. 4th ed rev and enl by W. E. Ford. Wiley 1932 851p illus $5.50 549

1 Crystallography 2 Mineralogy 32-15714

"Certain additions and much revision, as compared with the third edition of 1922, have been made in this new edition of E. S. Dana's well-known textbook. The chief additions are two. The crystallography section now includes a short account of crystal structure, as revealed by X-ray analysis, which provides a good introduction to an increasingly important branch of mineralogy. A section entitled 'Origin, Mode of Occurrence and Association of Minerals' is new to this book, though much of it has appeared in Dana's 'Manual of Mineralogy.'" Nature

"This book is not to be confused with the author's more complete 'System of mineralogy,' of which the descriptive part of this volume is essentially an abridgement. The longer work has not been revised since 1909, however, so that the present book is more up-to-date in several respects. . . This volume covers the subjects of crystallography and physical mineralogy with particular emphasis." Engineering and mining journal-press

32-21285

A brief guide to mining geology, now issued in revised form as one of the volumes of a series. It does not include coal, iron, or placer deposits. The book is reset and some of the old material has been omitted to make space for new. "The later has been chosen so as to present a somewhat more balanced picture of the mining industry as it now exists. The new material relates largely to the so-called porphyry coppers, to mines in Canada, Rhodesia, Alaska, and a number in the United States that have become important since the book was first written." Story of living things; a short account of the evolution of the biological sciences. Harper 1931 xxxv,572p illus $3 570

1 Biology—History 31-29639

Published in England under title: Short history of biology

"Dr. Singer, one of the most eminent historians of science, has filled a real need in this comprehensive volume. The first chapters discuss the outstanding figures of past centuries, but the bulk of the book gives a stirring account of the development of some of the theories of plant and animal biology. Although the book contains considerable detail, it is closely related and continuous in its theme, with plant biology receiving due attention. The last chapters give an excellent view of what is going on in the biological field." Amer. assn. for the advancement of science

1 Biology 2 Biology—Bibliography 31-28333

"In these two substantial volumes, two old collaborators, Professor J. Arthur Thomson and Professor Patrick Geddes, survey every department of biological science. The first nine chapters, which form the bulk of this work, are a detailed study of the various branches of the subject—characteristics of organisms, habits, interrelations (ecology), physiology, reproduction, sex, psychology, followed by sections on morphology and taxonomy, embryology, palaeontology, and a long discussion of organic evolution. The last four chapters are of rather a different kind, discussing, as they do, the position of biology among the sciences, the biology of man, the wider aspects of biology and its applications to the problems of human life, and ending with an outline theory of life." "A popular outline of biological knowledge in which Julian S. Huxley, the eminent biologist, and the son of H. G. Wells, a research worker in biological science, have had a part." Pratt quarterly

"A stupendous amount of information is arranged and explained without the burden of technical terms. Although the expositions are clear and simplified, they show no signs of 'talking down' to the reader. Except in the final generalising chapters, the authors do not moralise or interpret." Boston

571 PREHISTORIC ARCHEOLOGY

Books on prehistoric art are not included here but will be found in class 709 and subdivisions. Books on antiquities of special countries (e.g. "Primitive hearths in the Pyrenees" by Mrs R. O. S. Wallis and Ida Treat) will be found in class 913 and subdivisions

Libraries needing additional material in this class will find the following books of interest:

Boyle, M. E. In search of our ancestors; an attempt to retrace man's origin and development from later ages back to their beginnings; with a preface by the Abbé Henri Breul. . . Little 1928 286p illus map o.p. 1939

Boyle, M. E. Man before history; a short account of prehistoric times; with an introduction by the Abbé Henri Breul. . . Little 1924 xxi,135p illus $1.75 Tho intended for young readers it is usable as a simple account anywhere. Interesting illustrations

Burkitt, M. C. Our early ancestors; an introductory study of mesolithic, neolithic and copper age cultures in Europe and adjacent regions. Macmillan 1926 243p illus $2

1 Man, Prehistoric 28-21795

"An authoritative study on the prehistory of man and his long struggle toward civilization. The material has been gathered from many sources, is based upon careful research, and is admirably presented. The illustrations are attractive and well chosen. The Neolithic or New Stone age is stressed because the great fundamental inventions affecting man's physical well being and mental attitudes took place in this age." Bkl.

New discoveries relating to the antiquity of man. Williams & Norgate 1931 512p illus 21s 571

1 Man—Origin and antiquity 2 Man, Prehistoric [31-26865]

"A supplement to the author's Antiquity of man. . . The book discusses the significant anthropological discoveries of the last few years and shows their bearing on the problem of the evolution of man." Book rev. digest

"Sir Arthur Keith has the art to make his book read like a romance. For one thing, he can draw lively pen-pictures of the conditions presented in the form of a geological riddle by each site; and, though his primary purpose is to provide a clue to the chronology, he manages at the same time to impart something of that feverish excitement which turns all field archaeology into a glorified treasure-hunt." 1 Archeology 2 Man, Prehistoric 24-20653

A scholarly work, well printed and well illustrated. The first volume treats of the old stone age and the second one continues the history of early man through the new stone age and the ages of bronze and iron. Contains bibliographies

"Dr. MacCurdy is well qualified to produce a students' manual of prehistory with first-hand information, and his two handsome volumes now before us will be widely welcomed. He is cautious—perhaps too cautious—in expressing opinions of his own, but his work is most exhaustive in summarising the conclusions of the authors quoted by him." Nature

"The author reconstructs this account of the life of man in the new stone age from the records of shell heaps along the Baltic, stone monuments to the dead scattered thru northern Europe, temples like Stonehenge, remnants of lake dwellings, pottery, bones, weapons, garments, etc. . . The author says in his preface that while the historian and sociologist may find his book of value, it was the eager young student of whom he more often thought while writing it and its bibliography is prepared especially for him." Book rev. digest
"The author shows in many passages a quality of understanding and sympathetic imagination in regard to our Neolithic precursors that is both rare and delightful." H. F. Osborn in Literary rev.

1 Anthropogeography 2 Man—Influence of environment 24-30863

In the third edition four new chapters are added, and others are enlarged. There are many maps and charts and a bibliography

"A careful study of the effect of climate on man's energy and development, based on questionnaires filled out by expert observers in many countries. Only 5 of the 50 observers were Asiatics, so that the judgment given represents in the main the opinion of the white race, based on their conception of what constitutes a high type of civilization." Huntington, Ellsworth, 1876- and Cushing, Sumner W.

Principles of human geography. 4th ed Wiley 1934 xxii,467p illus maps (Huntington geography ser.) $3 573

1 Anthropogeography 34-27081

"The prefatory note of this edition states that 'the changes are so extensive that scarcely a single page is the same as in previous editions, and the whole work has been reset in fresh type.' Map making, slopes, the soil, and the farmer are some of the subjects receiving fuller treatment; a discussion of the geographic significance of Russia is added, and there are several new maps, including railroad maps." Bkl.

" 'Principles of human geography' is, first of all, a full résumé of the main points of contact between man and the physical world: his relations to climate, land and water bodies, animals, plants, minerals, etc., all of it discussed from the 'human' standpoint, showing how far and in what ways civilization is molded by geographical elements. But it is much more than a scientific summary. It touches the problems of to-day in politics, international dealings, economics, food supply, immigration, tariffs, conservation, and use of natural resources." Literary digest

This is our world. Univ. of Okla. press 1937 292p illus $2.50 573

1 Biology 2 Man—Influence of environment 37-28495

The "guiding thesis is environment, as exemplified in natural surroundings and habitats and, quite as importantly, in culture patterns. . . The book has three sections: the pattern of inanimate nature, of living nature, and of human cultures. The first is of course concerned with climate, soil, and the stream of energy; the second with evolution; and the third with an examination, so far as is possible to one within it, of the pattern of the existing techni-culture." Semple, Ellen Churchill, 1863-1932

Influences of geographic environment; on the basis of Ratzel's system of anthropogeography. Holt 1911 683p maps $4.50 573

1 Anthropogeography 11-12727

A careful and able presentation of the importance of geographic environment in man's development, based upon Ratzel's "Anthropogeographie"

"Miss Semple's volume is particularly valuable, especially as it is not simply a restatement of the principles embodied in Ratzel's work but comprises such amplification of some portions and abridgment of others as were necessary to make a more even presentation of the subject; at the same time as much evidence as possible of typical peoples of all races and all stages of cultural development living under similar geographical conditions has been incorporated." "The purpose of this book is not to unsettle the faith of anyone in some creed that has proved satisfactory and stimulating to him. We are not seeking to make converts to a belief in the doctrine of evolution. The purpose is simply to give some information that may prove interesting and useful, and that will serve to correct a good deal of misinformation that is current." Introduction

"The book would be valuable enough for its clear setting forth of the doctrine of evolution; it has the additional recommendation . . . of coming from authors who can combine both outlooks in a single view, without injury to either." Boston Transcript

"The great classic of biology and evolution. It gave, for the first time in the history of science, a convincing account of how organic evolution is chiefly accomplished. Every student of evolution should read and reread this classic. It is as vital and suggestive now as when it was first published [1859]. The real significance of the accurately worded title is often ignored and much is now written about Darwinism and Evolution by those who have only the vaguest ideas as to what evolution is or what Darwinism means." "The present volume is concerned simply with the process of evolution and not with Darwinism in the narrower sense of the word and furnishes an excellent summary brought well down to date by the reasons for the acceptance of evolution by biologists as generally as gravitation by astronomers. The volume suffers somewhat from the fact that the essays are quite independent of each other and so involve a certain amount of repetition. [Also] on account of the lack of editing of the essays there are occasional discrepancies more or less disconcerting." Sat. rev. of lit.

"Since the fifth edition of this book was published considerable progress has been made in the sciences of genetics and development. This has made it necessary to recast certain portions of the text and to add a few tables and illustrations. In particular some views which were tentatively expressed in former editions may now be put in positive form, and new evidence can be adduced in favor of others. This applies in particular to the causes of sex and to the experimental production of mutations." Preface to the sixth edition

"The author has succeeded remarkably well in a very difficult undertaking. For the lay reader can not fail to be interested in the wonderful array of post-Darwinian achievements in biology which are here marshalled in such a clear way; and the biologist . . . will profit much by the survey of the whole field in well-balanced perspective. . . The book is divided into six chapters, which deal with the following subjects: Facts and factors of development; Cellular basis of heredity and development; Phenomena of inheritance; Influence of environment; Control of heredity; Eugenics; Genetics and ethics." "By professors respectively of morphology, physiology and ecology, the three general divisions of the subject as organized at Hull botanical laboratory. . . Intended for undergraduate students, but for supplementary rather than ordinary text-book use." Pittsburgh

Coulter, Merle Crowe, 1894-

Story of the plant kingdom. Univ. of Chicago press 1935 270p illus $2.50 580

1 Botany 36-3289

"This book forms an eminently readable introduction to botanical science. It is intended primarily for the use of students at the University of Chicago, but should appeal equally to all those who are anxious to gain some knowledge of the structure and life-histories of representatives of the principal groups included in the plant kingdom. . . The book is profusely illustrated by excellent line drawings and photographs." Nature

Gager, Charles Stuart, 1872-

Plant world; plant life of our earth. Univ. soc. 1931 136p illus (University series; highlights of modern knowledge) $1 580

1 Botany 2 Plants 32-646

A brief discussion of some of the more interesting features of plant life. Partial contents: Census of the plant world; Selfish activities of plants; What is a flower? How flowers get their color; Seed dispersal; Great plant breeders; How science advances

Well-illustrated volume in a series which is planned to include simple, attractive books written by authorities in the fields covered. Brief bibliography

Earth's green mantle; plant science for the general reader; foreword by Sir A. W. Hill. Macmillan 1939 322p illus $3.50 580

1 Botany (W) 39-27869

"An account of the relationship between plants and man. Tells of the many ways in which plants make human life possible, and also of man's efforts to understand and utilize the earth's wealth of plant life." Ontario library review

Peattie, Donald Culross, 1898-

* Flowering earth; wood engravings by Paul Landacre. Putnam 1939 260p illus $2.50 580

1 Botany 2 Plants (W) 39-29407

This book shows to the layman, in layman's language, what the scientist sees in plant life on this planet. It gives the history of the plant world and the activity of plant life today. Bibliography

"Professional botanists will rightly be thrown into something like impotent fury by this book. Not because it is full of errors,—actually it is singularly free of them—but because it says what needs saying so much better than they have ever said it." Sat. rev. of lit.

Verrill, Alpheus Hyatt, 1871-

Wonder plants and plant wonders; illus. by photographs and drawings by the author. Appleton-Century 1939 296p illus $3 580

1 Botany 2 Plants (W) 39-14465

Contents: What is a plant; Plant department store; Most useful trees; Trees that grow while you wait; Plants that cure and kill; Plant giants; Intelligent plants; Plants that build rafts; Strange partners; Plants that sail seas; Plants that we eat; Wonder plants that we drink; Magic plants; Plants with strange uses; Plant travelers; Plant public enemies; Wonder plants of commerce and industry; First of all calendars; Most wonderful plants

"Mr. Verrill's compendium of strange and wonderful plants is an amazing and well-told story of botanical wonders, unbelievable but verifiable. His grasp of Spanish Creole patois and some of the Indian tongues accounts for many tales that won't be found in any other botanical work of similar nature." Christian science monitor

580.1 Botany—Nomenclature

Good sources of information for the translation of plant names from Latin to the common English form are L. H. Bailey's "Hortus" (class 630.3) and "Manual of cultivated plants" (class 582.13)

Bailey, Liberty Hyde, 1858-

How plants get their names. Macmillan 1933 209p $2.50 580.1

1 Botany—Nomenclature 33-12366

"Interesting and valuable work on principles of nomenclature and development of scientific names of plants. Includes extensive lists of accented generic and specific names, and explains the meaning of each of the specific names. Not concerned with common names and not to be confused with dictionaries of botanical terms." Pittsburgh

Clute, Willard Nelson, 1869-

Common names of plants and their meanings. Clute, W.N. & co. 1931 160p $3 580.1

1 Plant names, Popular 31-31518

"Interesting book of plant lore which traces the origin of names of common plants and gives stories associated with them." Pratt quarterly

A. T. Johnson's "Plant names simplified; their meanins and pronunciation" (Collingridge 1931 145p 3s 6d) gives a list of scientific names of plants with no reference to the common names

580.3 Botany—Dictionaries

B. D. Jackson's "Glossary of botanic terms, with their derivation and accent" (4th ed rev and enl Lippincott 1928 481p $5) is a valuable reference tool for libraries that need it. Contains about 25,000 terms

580.9 Botany—History

Harvey-Gibson, Robert John, 1860-1929
Outlines of the history of botany. Macmillan 1919 274p $2.50 580.9

1 Botany—History [Agr20-928]

"The following brief sketch of the history of botany makes no claim to originality save in the mode of presentation of the subject-matter. It comprises the substance of a course of lectures given to students of the University of Liverpool during their third year of residence, and has for its object the discussion of the more important features in the advance of botanical knowledge from the earliest times down to, approximately, the present day." Preface

Trees in winter; their study, planting, care and identification. Macmillan 1913 446p illus o.p. 1939 582

1 Trees 13-1605

"The term winter, as used by the authors, applies to the period when the tree is in a resting condition, from the shedding of its leaves to the bursting of its buds in spring. This period, of course, varies for different species and in different localities. Part 1 deals with the planting and care of trees, it being urged that, with the exception of spraying for leaf diseases, all care should be given the tree while in its dormant condition. Part 2 is intended as a guide to the identification of trees in winter. For each species there is a page of illustrations showing the complete tree in its winter outline, its bark, fruit, and a twig with buds." Book rev. digest

A. F. Blakeslee and C. D. Jarvis's "Trees in winter; their study and identification" (abridged ed Macmillan 1931 292p illus $2) includes only the chapters of tree study and identification. Contains 150 pages less than the earlier edition. A few additional studies have been included and a few corrections made

582.13 FLOWERS

In this catalog 582.13 includes wild flowers, following the suggestion of the editor of the Dewey decimal classification. Some libraries use 580, and others 581.9 or 583. The books on wild flowers listed here relate principally to American flowers. No effort has been made to include flowers of individual states. Local libraries will be able to find the best of these from their state library. The following noted books relating to flowers of specific areas may supplement such titles as those by Clements, Keeler and others fully entered below:

Flowers of coast and sierra. . . Wilson, H.W. 1928 226p $3 582.13

1 Flowers 29-3933

"For those who desire more than a mere knowledge of plant names, the text is planned to give information as to relationship, distribution, uses and the inter-actions between flowers and insects. While the illustrations are limited to a little more than two hundred of the most beautiful or familiar flowers of the Pacific Coast, from southern California to British Columbia, mention is made of many others in the same region, as well as of related species found elsewhere in the country. . . An endeavor has been made to present the facts in a readable manner." Preface

First published 1930 under title: "Bacteriology applied to nursing." In the 4th edition, "the subject matter has been rearranged to conform to the Unit plan of the Curriculum Guide for Schools of Nursing. . . The chapters on vaccines, immune serums and tests related to disease and immunity have been entirely rewritten. Careful revision has been given the 60-page section dealing specifically with the casual agents of communicable disease. . . A new chapter on important historical phases of microbiology has been added, supplementing the historical facts given at the close of each chapter and indicating the progressive development of this science." Preface to the 4th edition

The authors have attempted to make this more detailed and concrete than general textbooks in microbiology

1 Bacteriology 33-3581

First published 1928. The second edition is practically a reprint of the first with minor corrections

"This laboratory guide for beginners in general bacteriology should prove useful in those institutions where a general course in bacteriology is given and where no special emphasis is described on a particular branch of the science. It is well written and profusely illustrated. A few of the figures could have been omitted without injuring the high character of the book, but these shortcomings are more than compensated for by the very good illustrations showing glassware, apparatus, microscope, and other equipment." " 'Thousands of scientists have devoted their lives to the study of the Animal Kingdom with the result that we now have a rather comprehensive knowledge of the galaxy of species.' Here in this voluminous book this knowledge is presented. Beginning with the protozoa, the first division in the parade. Dr. Hegner . . . calls attention to the representative groups of animals. These range from sponges, worms, and crustaceans, through insects, fish, amphibia and birds to the mammals, flying, gnawing, hoofed, flesh-eating and aquatic. The primates are considered last." Popular treatment of the living vertebrates of North America intended to bridge the gulf between scientific treatises and nature study literature

"It is a bulky volume, richly illustrated with photographs and packed full of facts. Mr. Hornaday's life has been spent among wild animals, as hunter, trapper, keeper, collector; and this, in spite of the very scientific cast of the book, often gives it a personal, first-hand flavor hardly to be expected in a general natural history, even when limited to American fauna." 1 Natural history (26-26536)

"Notable work by an eminent English biologist who can present science in an entertaining way. The arrangement is not formal, and each volume can be used independently. The volumes are well-printed, and have many interesting illustrations, part of them colored. . . A book that readers will enjoy. Index to the set in the third volume." Standard catalog for high school libraries

1 Zoology 32-26380

Consists largely of chapters from the author's "New natural history." All small libraries may not need both books

"Tells pleasantly and with a little flavour of homily what most people wish to know about animals. . . Sir Arthur devotes the larger part of his book to mammals and birds, and is most at home with creatures which live in this country." Times (London) lit. sup.

Wieman, Harry Lewis, 1883-

General zoology. 3d ed McGraw 1938 497p illus (McGraw-Hill publications in the zoological sciences) $3.50 590

1 Zoology 38-17686

First published 1925. In the 3d edition the text of the preceding edition has been almost completely rewritten, enlarged and brought up to date. References have now been gathered together instead of being scattered thruout the text: p459-62

"A rather condensed account of some of the outstanding facts and principles of zoölogy, selected and arranged to serve the student as a guide; the form of the text having been kept as flexible as possible to permit of expansion or extension in whatever direction the instructor may see fit." Preface

"The best chapters, in our opinion, are those on evolution and heredity; many of the other subjects are treated so briefly as to be largely ineffective. The illustrations are carefully chosen and well reproduced." Nature

590.7 Aquariums

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

Hodge, A. E. and Derham, Arthur. Goldfish culture for amateurs. Stokes 1926 103p illus $2 A good book within its limits. It includes a short history of the goldfish together with directions for its breeding and rearing

Innes, W. T. Exotic aquarium fishes. 3d ed Innes 1938 472p illus $5 A beautifully produced book but expensive for most small libraries

Coates, Christopher W.

* Tropical fishes for a private aquarium; photographs by S. C. Dunton. Liveright 1933 226p illus $2 590.7

1 Aquariums 2 Fishes 34-609

"Expert advice in non-technical language for the amateur collector and breeder of tropical fish, which, because of the breezy style and many illustrations, makes interesting reading for the layman as well. Covers such subjects as identification of varieties, increase of breeding, proper feeding, breeds of fish which can live together amicably and treatment of fish ailments." Wis. bul.

Innes, William Thornton, 1874-

Goldfish varieties and tropical aquarium fishes; a guide to aquaria and related subjects. 15th ed Innes 1932 317p illus $4 590.7

1 Aquariums 2 Goldfish 33-7077

"This useful reference book on the care of fish in the home aquarium has gone through many editions, but without statement of the amount of revision. . . The publishers state that the material on tropical fish, which is condensed in this volume, will be supplemented by a forthcoming book on tropicals." Bkl.

"Practical, detailed information on the construction, stocking and care of freshwater and marine aquaria, with good clear illustrations." Cleveland

Lederer, Norbert L. 1888-

Tropical fish & their care; illus. by W. H. Southwick and D. H. Furth. Knopf 1934 xxi,229p illus $2.50 590.7

1 Aquariums 2 Fishes 34-10343

"The author is a well-known amateur in the breeding and care of tropical fish, and he has put into his book not only all the information needed by any one who wants to go in for this hobby but also something of the interest and zeal with which he has himself pursued it." N.Y. Times

Mellen, Ida M. 1877-

Fishes in the home. Dodd 1927 178p illus $2 590.7

1 Aquariums 2 Fishes 27-5575

Based on the pamphlet "Fishes in the home" published in 1921 by the New York zoological society. "The old matter has been supplemented with additional material throughout, and chapters have been added on the subjects of salt water aquaria and construction of small aquaria and garden pools, with a special elaboration on the subject of the care of sick fishes." Author

"The author's association with the New York aquarium gives this book authority. The subject seems to be very fully covered, the illustrations are excellent and the book should meet a need." Wis. bul.

Mellen, Ida M. 1877- and Lanier, Robert J.

* 1001 questions answered about your aquarium; toy-fishes—fresh, brackish and salt water; also your garden pool and terrarium. Dodd 1935 450p illus $3 590.7

1 Aquariums 2 Fishes 3 Water gardens 35-27414

"Information about goldfish and toy tropicals, with details of care and treatment of ailments. Roughly classified arrangement, with full index. Bibliography of books and magazine articles." Bkl.

Morgan, Alfred Powell, 1889-

Tropical fishes and home aquaria; a practical guide to a fascinating hobby. . . Scribner 1935 254p illus $2.50 590.7

1 Aquariums 2 Fishes 35-4744

"An excellent book for beginners, not too technical for young people, containing information valuable to all fish enthusiasts. The illustrations are good—those labeled 'don't' being especially worth while—and, although not in color, are so carefully drawn that the fish can be identified at once. Chapters on 'Food and feeding' and 'Water in the aquarium' will save many a beginner and some others from disaster." Wis. bul.

591 PHYSIOLOGICAL ZOOLOGY

591.5 Animals—Habits and behavior

Books listed in this class are sometimes akin to those classified as Fiction. The dividing line is difficult to draw, but in general those classified in 591.5 are factual books whose aim is to describe and instruct rather than to amuse

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

Morgan, C. L. Animal mind. Longmans 1930 275p illus $4.25

Scoville, Samuel. Wild honey; with reproductions of etchings by Emerson Tuttle. Little 1929 203p illus o.p. 1939 Contains a dozen delightful sketches of out-of-door adventure which the author's enthusiasm and humor make dramatic

Seton, E. T. Lives of the hunted. Scribner 1901 $2.50

Sharp, D. L. Face of the fields. Houghton 1911 250p $2

Thomson, J. A. Minds of animals; an introduction to the study of animal behaviour. Hudson 1927 206p front 2s

Williamson, Henry. Tarka, the otter; his joyful water-life and death in the country of the Two Rivers. Dutton 1928 260p $2.50

Allee, Warder Clyde, 1885-

Social life of animals. Norton 1938 293p illus $3 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior (W) 38-25867

This book is based on a series of lectures given at Northwestern university. The author's object is to present the proofs, obtained thru many years of research, of social organization and the rudiments of cooperation in many ranks of animal life outside of such admittedly social groups as ants, bees, etc. The book opens with a chapter on science versus metaphysics, and toward the close contains one on the human implications of the biologist's theories

"The book's parts are somewhat loosely knit, but the story is told without trace of technical obscurity by a scholar who regards modern science as 'glorified common sense.' Its important timely value will be to acquaint lay readers with a considerable mass of experimental research that has created a sensation in biological circles during the past few years." N.Y. Times

Blair, William Reid, 1875-

* In the zoo; representing twenty-seven years of observation and study of the animals in the New York zoological park; foreword by Madison Grant. . . Scribner 1929 195p illus $2.50 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 New York. Zoological park 3 Zoology 29-21581

"Discusses many of the groups of animals the author has been observing for 25 years, the babies, pygmies and giants, the capturing of animals for the zoo, feeding the captives, and medical and surgical treatment. Photographic illustrations." N.Y. libraries

"One reads the book with a sense of dependability, because it is evident from the start that Dr. Blair writes about animals only what he has seen and himself knows to be true. He does not imagine or embroider or indulge in sentiment or conjecture. Instead he sets down in crisp, brief sentences the simple truth as he has observed it. And whoever likes animals will find in the book a wonderful lot of varied and interesting knowledge." N.Y. Times

Boulenger, Edward George, 1888-

The London zoo; with 60 pages of photographs. Dutton 1937 211p illus $2 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Zoological gardens 3 Zoological society of London. Gardens 38-15395

Gives many details of the life of the animals, birds, fish, reptiles and insects who live at the zoo

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Zoological society of London. Gardens 27-26591

Formerly carried also by Brentano's

"An unusually delightful account with stories about the characteristics and habits of inhabitants of the Regent's Park menagerie in London. The author has an intimate knowledge of animals and describes their antics with humor and unsentimental understanding. Birds, snakes, lizards, and toads are included as well as monkeys, cats, and larger animals. The pen and ink sketches of postures and various activities are inimitable and add much to the interest of the book." Bkl.

Brown, Clarence Emerson

My animal friends. Doubleday 1932 262p illus o.p. 1939 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Animals—Stories 3 Zoological society of Philadelphia. Gardens 32-8787

"Sight-seers at the zoo will find added pleasure in their visits after reading about the lives of their animal friends in captivity. Care, feeding and habits of large and small animals, birds, and reptiles are described by the director of the Philadelphia zoological garden who gives also a chapter of advice on the care of home pets. Excellent photographic illustrations." Bkl.

Buck, Frank, 1882- and Fraser, Ferrin L.
Fang and claw. Simon & Schuster 1935 239p o.p. 1939 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Zoology—East (Far East) 35-5887

"Experiences of a collector of wild animals, who tells about the human beings translplanted into the Far Eastern jungles, as well as about the beasts." Boston

The author "is one of the rare articulate adventurers who has the good sense not to be forever asserting that he is the fellow who shot the bear. Through most of this book he is content to sit back and tell the tales of others' deeds." N.Y. Times

Burroughs, John, 1837-1921
Ways of nature. Houghton 1905 279p front $2.25 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Natural history 5-32706

"In these essays Mr. Burroughs, who has ranged himself upon the side of those who protest against animal stories which humanize animal life, not only sets forth his own views, in which he declares that animals share our emotional but not our intellectual nature, but also defends himself from . . . attacks upon his theories and gives counter arguments." Book rev. digest

"The whole discussion is pervaded by Mr. Burroughs' well-known charm of style and clearness of statement." Review of reviews

Ditmars, Raymond Lee, 1876-
Confessions of a scientist. Macmillan 1934 241p illus $3.50 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Zoology 34-37236

"The scope of a naturalist's daily work in laboratory and field, with its varied, unexpected, and often hazardous duties, is well illustrated here. The author's account of his search for vampire bats, his care of live specimens, his motion picture experiences with the deadly mamba, and his experiments with snake poisons and immunization furnish vicarious adventure for the reader. Told informally." Bkl.

Fight to live... Stokes 1938 231p illus $2.50 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior (W) 38-27368

Shows how men, animals, insects, reptiles and fishes have struggled for existence. Contents: Man's fight for life; Anthropoid apes and the monkeys; Teeth, claws, horns, antlers, spines and armor; Lives of beavers and their kin; Among the birds; Down the scale to the reptiles; Poisonous snakes and their enemies; Struggle of the amphibians; Defenses of fishes; Smoke screens, poison gas and camouflage; In the world of make-believe; Disciplined warfare long before man

Making of a scientist. Macmillan 1937 258p illus $2.75 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 New York. Zoological park (W) 37-28546

Contents: Episode of the thousand flies; Private life of Attacus Yamamaia; Strange party of three; Tangents; Diamond-backs; Dew in the desert; New slants at the monkeys; Problems of a bear hunt; Quiet night; Hurricane; Whys of a snowstorm; Chain of islands; Quest of the giant bat; Snake nursery; Paradox frog

"This is a book about a 'scientist's good times, and some of his disappointments.' If it is episodic it is perhaps because he wishes to emphasize that his interests have been multiple, a fact which has added considerably to his zest for life. The book points no moral, but it should stimulate some youngsters to emulate his example, and some adults to give a thought to what goes on in the offices and laboratories which they do not see when visiting the Zoo." Sat. rev. of lit.

‡ Strange animals I have known. Harcourt 375p illus $1.69 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 New York. Zoological park [31-28016]

Reprint of title first published 1931 by Brewer

"Dr Ditmars is curator of reptiles and mammals in New York Zoological Park. 'For over a quarter of a century,' he says, 'it has been my task to capture, transport, feed, nurse, soothe, fight, guard and cajole various specimens of the animal kingdom. I have been on intimate terms with snakes, bears, apes, monkeys, elephants, jaguars, tigers, buffaloes, giraffes, deer, kudus, hippos, wild horses, kiangs, rhinos, lions, cougars, leopards, kangaroos, beasts of almost every sort and many other species.' His book contains many fascinating stories of his experiences at home and abroad. Illustrated with photographs." Book rev. digest

Thrills of a naturalist's quest. Macmillan 1932 268p illus $3.50 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Reptiles 3 Zoological specimens—Collection and preservation 32-32138

Stories of some of the adventures the author had while capturing snakes and other specimens for the New York zoological park

"For all his distinguished career, Dr. Ditmars is an able journalist and this volume, partly biography, partly adventure, with here and there a dash of natural history to hold the mass together, has a thrill or a chuckle on nearly every page." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Ditmars, Raymond Lee, 1876- and Bridges, William, 1901-
* Wild animal world; behind the scenes at the zoo. Appleton-Century 1937 302p illus $3 591.5

Contents: First catch your animal; —And feed him well; Doctoring under difficulties; Do snakes swallow their young? New prizes in the jungle; Animal myths and superstitions; Don't you believe it! Weapons—not concealed; Getting ready for snow; Animals in carpet slippers; Unexpected always happens; Pea-green lion; Fishing worm twelve feet long; Keeper's pet; Midnight in the zoo; Adventures with elephants; Fish are big business; Nose for zoo news

"Almost every one will know the animals better for reading this book and should be moved to call upon them oftener." N.Y. Times

R. L. Ditmars and William Bridges' "Snake-hunters' holiday" (Appleton-Century 1935 309p illus $3.50) recounts the work of a tropical collecting trip to British Guiana and Trinidad

Finley, William Lovell, 1876- and Finley, Mrs Irene (Barnhart) 1880-

Wild animal pets. Scribner 1928 311p illus $3.50 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Animals—Stories 3 Photography of animals 28-8927

"Delightful sketches written by the state biologist and game warden of Oregon and his wife. They relate with fresh interest a variety of experiments in raising the young of wild animals—a bear, panther, coyote, squirrel, skunk, two bob cats, a California condor, and a porcupine. Incidents about other wild friends are included. The unusually fine illustrations from photographs are proof of the authors' patience and skill. Of interest both to children and grown-ups." Bkl.

Hornaday, William Temple, 1854-1937

Minds and manners of wild animals; a book of personal observations. Scribner 1922 328p illus $2.50 591.5

1 Animal intelligence 2 Animals—Habits and behavior 22-26396

The author believes that "the most interesting thing about a wild animal is its mind and its reasoning." In his study of the mentality of wild animals he has observed closely animals both in captivity and in the open and he recounts many interesting and unusual incidents

"Mr. Hornaday's book is the pondered judgment of a practical man on a question of extreme mystery. It is both brilliant and careful, and it is an event in the literature of natural history. If one may make a criticism, it is a pity he did not gather together the threads of his thesis in a final chapter." Spectator

W. T. Hornaday's "Wild-animal round-up; stories and pictures of the passing show" (Scribner 1925 372p illus $5) contains reminiscences of hunting experiences in various parts of the world

Mills, Enos Abijah, 1870-1922

Watched by wild animals; illus. from photographs and from drawings by Will James. Houghton 243p illus $2.50 591.5

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Nature study 32-26086

Reprint of title first published by Doubleday 1922

"In these stories of adventures in the open, the author shows us that while we are watching animals we are also watched by them and that wild animals show great curiosity in a human intruder. His keen observations of the habits of such animals as the mountain-goat and sheep, beaver, antelope, skunk, prairie-dog and grizzly bear are those of a painstaking observer." Book rev. digest

"It was well to write a book of this kind and Mr. Mills was the very man to write it. His short, almost staccato, sentences, many of them, however, conveying much of the real beauty of nature in her best moods, seemingly are often transliterations of his field notes. But to criticise his literary style were like straining at gnats and altogether missing the camel." Literary rev.

E. A. Mills' "Wild animal homesteads; illus. by Will James" (Houghton 1923 259p illus $2.50) are more true stories of Rocky Mountain animals

Naturalist in La Plata. Dutton 1923 394p illus $3 591.9

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Zoology—Argentine Republic 22-26893

First published in 1892

A series of papers upon the animals and birds of Argentina, written with the keen observation and sound scientific background of a great naturalist. Some of the subjects are curious animal weapons, fear in birds, nature's night-lights, the death-feigning instinct, and music and dancing in nature. There are also chapters about the puma, the skunk, grasshoppers, dragonflies, mosquitoes, bees, wasps, spiders, hummingbirds, the vizcacha, the huanaco, cattle and horses

Kearton, Cherry, 1871-

* In the land of the lion. McBride 1920 298p illus $2.50 591.9

1 Zoology—Africa, Central 30-6169

"In its twenty short chapters the author has something to say about most of the animals of the African bush and many birds and insects. The best, perhaps, is his chapter on the white ant. Systematic natural history is not his strong point, but his light sketches of the doings, family life, and frolics of the larger animals, lion, elephant, giraffe, hippopotamus, rhinoceros, and many more, are excellent reading, and conjure up fascinating pictures of wild life in sun-scorched bush, river, and swamp. The eighty-eight illustrations are mostly photographs from the author's film 'Tembi,' one of the best Central African films yet produced." Nature

Sanderson, Ivan T.—Continued

"Once again Mr. Sanderson has written an inimitable study of small animals and insects; this time those he found on his honeymoon journey. . . His wife shares his enthusiasm for studying curious creatures in their natural habitats." Cincinnati

White, Gilbert, 1720-1793

Natural history & antiquities of Selborne in the county of Southampton. Macmillan 1905 476p (Lib. of English classics) $3 591.9

1 Natural history—England—Selborne 2 Selborne, England Agr32-498

This book, first published in 1789, combines a charming style with accurate observations on plant and animal life, and is based upon letters which the author wrote to two other naturalists, Thomas Pennant and Daines Barrington, in which he gives a full description of the natural history of the parish of Selborne, his lifelong home, including quaint and careful details of the birds, flowers and trees. It has gone thru many editions

1 Arcturus (Ship) 2 Galapagos Islands —Description and travel 3 Keeling Islands 4 Marine fauna 5 Scientific expeditions 26-26558

"The expedition sailed from Brooklyn February 11, 1925, and returned to New York July 30, touching in the interval at Norfolk, Bermuda, Panama, Cocos Island, and the Galapagos. The object in this volume is to present a scientifically accurate, popular account of the high lights and vivid experiences of the expedition." Pittsburgh

"In it the sea personalities, flora and fauna, are given their usual glamorous place, and the whole narrative is illuminated by Mr Beebe's exquisite style. . . There are no travel books quite like these, and the scientist is always soundly back of the romancer." Bookman

Beneath tropic seas; a record of diving among the coral reefs of Haiti... Putnam 1928 234p illus map $3.50 591.92

1 Birds—Haiti 2 Diving, Submarine 3 Haiti—Description and travel 4 Marine fauna 5 Scientific expeditions 28-22400

Also available in the Halcyon house edition from Blue ribbon bks. at $1.59

"The sea floor, with its coral reefs, in the Bay of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, is the scene of many chapters of this glamorous book. Whether Beebe is describing what he sees from his diver's helmet, that wonderful unreal world of brilliant, bewildering color life under the water, or whether he is quietly sitting on the beach, watching the life of the shore, the door to a totally new set of experiences is opened for the reader. Appendices offer further information. Decorated end papers, colored frontispiece, photographs, index." N.Y. libraries

"Some of these chapters are slight, and not all deal with submarine life; but by far the most arresting are those which enable us to see, through Dr. Beebe's reflective eyes, the wonderful fairyland of the waters in which he rambled in his diving-dress." Times (London) lit. sup.

1 Vertebrates 29-15262

Originally appeared in 1876 as "A manual of vertebrates of the northern United States." In preparing the fifth edition the author revised the work stressing less artificial characters and beginning the series with the lowest instead of the most specialized forms. Succeeding editions differed from the fifth in alterations in plates only. The present edition has been thoroly revised and reset

1 Vertebrates 35-11000

First published 1923. "The main purpose of the revision of this Manual has been to reflect in it the numerous changes in the nomenclature of the Vertebrate animals of the United States which have been made in the past few years, and to define more precisely their known ranges of distribution." Preface to the second edition

"An extremely valuable reference work, including brief history, classification, and description of species and geographical subspecies throughout the United States exclusive of Alaska and insular possessions. Is based on the best of the existing guides to special classes of vertebrates and has had the benefit of critical reading and revision by the highest authorities in their respective fields." Life story of the fish; introduction by William Beebe. Appleton-Century 1938 260p illus $3 597

1 Fishes (W) 38-27296

Technically accurate, but informal in tone with an occasional touch of wit, this work is a description of the anatomy and physiology of fishes, their life habits and methods of reproduction. Partial contents: What is a fish; Body covering; The senses and the nervous system; The air-bladder; Internal workings; Reproduction and growth; Habits and adaptations

"Fascinating stuff for the angler, amateur biologist, naturalist, or just anyone who has ever wondered about the odd life fish lead. Amusing, simple, and sounds authoritative." New Yorker

Fishes. rev ed Appleton 1925 773p illus o.p. 1939 597

1 Fishes 25-6965

"Practical reprint of the 1907 edition with a new preface. Chapter on 'Résumé of the classification of fishes and fishlike vertebrates' (pages 757-71) has been omitted. Otherwise pagination remains the same. Changes not sufficient to necessitate replacement." Bkl.

"In this volume the writer has tried to compress all that an educated man is likely to know, or care to know, about fishes. Except for details of brooks and flies, it will answer all questions likely to be asked by anglers. Each one of the food and game fishes of the United States is treated with considerable fullness. Its special message is, however, to lovers of nature and to those to whom a fish is something more than a fish—an organism fresh from the mint of creation, with the history of its ancestors compressed in its structure and habits." Preface

"The author and his wife camped for months on a rocky island which is the breeding place of the Blackfooted or Jack-ass Penguins. Surrounded by some five million penguins, the naturalist made a study of the domestic affairs, enemies and pleasures of these amusingly human birds. His sprightly book is well illustrated with photographs." Cleveland

"This little volume is based almost entirely on a course of lectures given before the Lowell Institute of Boston in the autumn of 1925. It is a refreshing treatment because so many of the well-worn stock illustrations and examples of the various phases of avian migration are replaced by original observations made by the author in the course of his extensive field experience from Alaska to Patagonia. It will appeal particularly to American readers, as its ages are crowded with incidents taking place in the United States, referring to many of our commonest and best-known birds." Literary rev.

"Taking two beaver kittens as pets completely changed the author's attitude toward trapping beaver, and led finally to the establishment of a beaver sanctuary by the Canadian government. The story by this self-taught Indian writer includes not only the struggle of Grey Owl and his wife for existence in the Canadian wilderness but more especially the way their lives were enriched by beaver pets, so appealing in their response to friendly human beings, so versatile in adapting themselves to unnatural conditions of camp life, yet full of mischievous proclivities, artless whimsicality and intense activities. Photographs, sketches by Grey Owl." N.Y. libraries

1 Mammals 31-2452

"For this revised edition of 1930, the author has reassembled his biographies into groups, with an introduction for each, so that the text may be more readily adapted to the use of students of zoology, without sacrificing in any particular its popular appeal." Gilbert Grosvenor in Foreword

"This is a scientific work of a very unusual kind. It consists of a series of capital life studies of the most important big and small mammals of North America, by Edward W. Nelson, chief of the Biological survey, with admirable colored pictures by Louis Agassiz Fuertes and track sketches by Ernest Thompson Seton, and some excellent photographs and sketches by other men. We owe its production to the National geographic society, which expended a hundred thousand dollars on it in the two issues of the magazine [November 1916 and May 1918] in which it appeared as two separate articles." "A social history of the American people in terms of the factor which the author considers of most importance in shaping the American pattern, technological invention. Beginning with printing and its influence on the colonization of the new world, he follows the development of handicrafts and simple mechanical innovations in the colonial period, devoting a full chapter to Franklin. From this point on, major inventions and their social consequences down to 1865 are covered, with a bibliography of 19p and a chronology of events and invention, 9p." Wis. bul.

"The book," the compiler says, "is not a technical work on commercial designing; its purpose is to show marks that have ornamental significance as well as characteristic trade value, with the hope that it will prove a worthy influence in the creation of new marks, and in the adaptation of old ones. The majority of the reproductions are taken from the marks of less well-known organizations and individuals, for the reason that our national advertisers use marks that may have distinctive features, but which are frequently so devoid of design as to be positively ugly"

"Two new chapters, one on medicine in prehistoric times, the other on medicine in the World war and after, have been added. The enlargement is greater than the increase in the number of pages shows because there are more words to a page than in the third edition and more matter has been set in small type. The bibliographical section has been revised and enlarged." Mudge

"Each chapter consists of a biographic and a general portion, the former setting forth the main features of the lives, endeavors and accomplishments of those who have contributed in any degree to the advancement of medicine, while the latter sums up succinctly and clearly the conditions under which they lived and worked . . . Its thoroughness, conciseness and clearness bespeak for it the fullest appreciation from all who are interested in the past and future of medicine." Science

"Despite the fact that several books have been written during the last three or four years on the place of medicine and the doctor in history, Dr. Haggard's book deserves special consideration. Written primarily for his children in order that through the history of health, seen in the lives of the great doctors, they may understand the social logic of modern medicine, it offers the public an exceptionally well written and sometimes amusing survey of disease and its conquest even before the time of man." 612 Physiology

There are a number of good text books of physiology which have not been included here because the average small library will not need more than those listed below. Some good English and American titles suggested by collaborators it has been necessary to omit on this account. If additional material is needed the following books are recommended:

Halliburton, W. D. and McDowall, R. J. S. Handbook of physiology and biochemistry. 35th ed Blakiston 1937 973p illus $5.50 A completely revised edition of a standard English work

Kirkpatrick, T. B. and Huettner, A. F. Fundamentals of health; the human organism, its development and conservation. Ginn 1931 576p illus $3.80

Martin, H. N. Human body; its structure and activities and the conditions of its healthy working. 12th ed rev by E. G. Martin Holt 1934 701p illus (American science ser. Advanced course) $4.25

Starling, E. H. Starling's Principles of human physiology. 7th ed, ed and rev by C. L. Evans. . . The chapters on the central nervous system and sense organs rev. by H. Hartridge. . . Lea 1936 1096p illus $8.75

Stopes, M. C. C. Human body. Putnam 1926 268p illus $2.50

Cannon, Walter Bradford, 1871-
* Wisdom of the body. Norton 1939 333p illus $3.50 612
1 Physiology 39-27360
First published 1932. In this edition "new facts and developments in the realm of bodily stabilization have been incorporated, in order to bring the exposition up to date; and also a new chapter has been added, on the effects of age on homeostatic mechanisms." Preface

"A professor of physiology . . . explains, with admirable clarity, the nature of the remarkable stability of all parts of the human organism, and how it is achieved; by what corrective agencies disturbances are prevented, and normal conditions restored. For the intelligent layman. Photographs, diagrams, graphs. References, bibliography, index." N.Y. libraries

"The announcement in the preface, the 'purpose is to present concisely the accepted facts with only a limited description of the experiments by which these facts have been established,' gives an idea of the scope and nature of the book. . . On the whole, the book fulfills its particular purpose better than any other with which I am familiar. Writing such a book is a particularly difficult task, and the author has succeeded better than most." Science

1 Glands, Ductless 2 Reproduction 3 Sex 33-13492
"The purpose of this book is to present the scientific facts and theories of reproduction in sufficient detail to accomplish two things: first, to answer most of the questions that non-professional students and intelligent laymen are likely to ask about the anatomy and physiology of human procreation; and second, to provide the biological basis for a scientific attitude toward sex and its problems. Some attention is therefore directed toward the phenomena of reproduction in lower forms of life, since these more primitive organisms often illustrate clearly and simply the scientific principles that apply equally to our own more complicated conditions." Preface
"Professor Parshley's volume is one of the most intelligent, well informed and readable contributions to the subject in recent years." New republic

1 Hygiene 2 Mental physiology and hygiene 32-11787

"Rather popular discussion of modern living conditions as affecting health. Considers routine exercises less valuable than activities and hobbies which will give mental satisfaction as well as physical exercise." Pittsburgh

"This book takes up the subject in a simple, witty and in some cases a startling way. It is practical as well as entertaining. It differs from the other books in a similar field in that it analyzes the specific problem of the modern business and professional man in its emphasis upon such important matters as mental health, hobbies, vacations, and two interesting chapters entitled 'The Tired Business Man' and 'The Retired Business Man.'" First and second editions published 1927 and 1933. "It has been necessary to make a thorough revision of every topic because there have been many additions to our knowledge of every dietary essential . . . and great activity in the assay of foods for vitamin values has furnished a mass of data, necessitating complete revision of all tables and dietaries." Preface

"Professor Rose's book has the merit of being written by an authority on nutrition—an authority who witholds little of what she knows and who writes with distinction. The book is . . . one of the best and yet it is one of the simplest expositions of the science of nutrition to be found in the English language. The historical introduction and the chapters on mineral constituents and vitamins have been particularly well handled." N.Y. Evening post

Written to provide school-teachers and high-school and college students with the facts regarding the actions and effects of alcohol on man, as these are now known to the medical sciences. It is a brief statement of the facts set forth in "Alcohol and man" a symposium by Dr Emerson and others which is listed in the main catalog

"Dr. Emerson's sane, judicial and scientific presentation of the conclusions to which medical men are predominantly agreed comes at a timely moment, when nation-wide influences in favor of increasing use of alcoholic beverages are being met by contrary opinions, with much consequent disputation, frequently ill-informed, on both sides." 1 Alcohol—Physiological effect

"The sixteen articles on the effect of alcohol on man, which make up this composite volume, present only such facts as have been determined by science, and opinions supported by these facts. Most of the authors are physicians and members of university faculties and the question of prohibition does not enter into their discussions, which tend to place the emphasis on the effect of alcohol on the mind rather than on the body." Bkl.

"What remains to be done with the work of these scientists is to make their information so simple as to reproduce it in the knowledge of school children and common people. 1 Foot (W) 39-27149

A discussion, for the layman, of the various ills to which the foot is heir

"Altho a book on the care of the feet will attract the layman, it is really the doctor who should heed its message. The average practitioner pays little, if any, attention to foot disorders, leaving their care to the shoeman. Dr. Morton especially recommends X-ray in diagnosing foot ailments and disagrees with many of the usual practices." Wis. bul.

616.8 Diseases of the nervous system

In order to keep all books on the nervous system together in this catalog, books on diseases of the nervous system are classified in 613.8 with other books on the nervous system in general. For pathological psychology see class 132

Boome, Edward James, and Richardson, M. A.
Nature and treatment of stammering. Dutton 1932 135p $1.50 616.87

1 Stammering 32-2338

"If, as seems clear, stammering be essentially a psychic disorder, the physical contortions being but consequent on mental panic, it is to the mind and the emotions and not to the speech mechanism that rational treatment should be directed... The means whereby relaxation of mind and body is to be cultivated, stammering restrained and spontaneous speech re-established are interestingly and in much detail expounded in this useful book." Times (London) lit. sup.

C. S. Bluemel's "Mental aspects of stammering" (Williams & Wilkins 1930 152p $2.50) is a book for teachers and parents as well as for specialists, which deals mainly with the treatment of stammering

1 Lice 2 Rats as carriers of contagion 3 Typhus fever 35-27046
"Being a study in biography, which, after twelve preliminary chapters indispensable for the preparation of the lay reader, deals with the life history of typhus fever." Subtitle
"Regarding typhus as public enemy number one, the author tells many interesting facts concerning its origin, distribution, transmission, treatment, and prevention. In this connection he has much to say about the tragic relation to man of rats, mice, lice, fleas, and other pests down through the ages. Told with abundant references to history, in a style which is philosophic, entertaining, and pleasantly digressive." Bkl.

617 SURGERY

1 Mouth 2 Teeth 27-22454
"The subject is surprisingly well covered in a non-technical way in these few pages, though still more emphasis on the importance of preventive dentistry (with a discussion of how preventive dentistry differs from palliative or curative dentistry) might have been expected. The book would have been improved by a brief interesting statement emphasizing the present status of oral hygiene and pointing out that the chief hope for the future lies in early preventive dentistry." American journal of public health
"A competent book. The style is a simple one for the layman and the question and answer method is used." Chicago

Urling, Lewis Harold
Your teeth; their care and preservation. Dorrance 1932 67p $1.50 617.6

620.1 Applied mechanics. Engineering materials

In this class will be found books which discuss tests and properties of engineering and building materials. For books which describe the uses of building materials see class 691

Five books recommended especially for larger libraries and engineering students are:

Moore, H. F. and Kommers, J. B. Fatigue of metals, with chapters on the fatigue of wood and concrete. McGraw 1927 326p illus $4

Riggs, N. C. and Frocht, M. M. Strength of materials; a first course. Ronald 1938 432p illus $3.75

Salmon, E. H. Materials and structures; a text-book for engineering students . . . Longmans 1931-38 2v illus v 1 $6, v2 $12

Timoshenko, Stephen and MacCullough, G. H. Elements of strength of materials. 2d ed Van Nostrand 1940 365p illus $3.25 Primarily a textbook for undergraduate courses in colleges

Timoshenko, Stephen, and Young, D. H. Engineering mechanics. . . McGraw 1937 2v illus ea $2.75 One volume deals with dynamics and the other, with statics

Boyd, James Ellsworth, 1863-
Strength of materials. 4th ed McGraw 1935 548p illus $3.75 620.1

1 Strength of materials 35-3384

The fourth edition has been enlarged by more than a hundred pages

"Text-book emphasizing the physical and mathematical ideas underlying the mechanics of materials. Contains problems. Requires considerable knowledge of calculus and theoretical mechanics. Designed for use with the handbook of the Cambria steel company or the 'Pocket companion' of the Carnegie steel company." Pittsburgh

Brady, George Stuart, 1887-
* Materials handbook; an encyclopedia for purchasing agents, engineers, executives, and foremen. 3d ed McGraw 1937 663p illus $5 620.1

1 Building materials — Dictionaries 2 Commercial products—Dictionaries 37-2706

First published 1929. For the third edition the material has been revised and enlarged, particularly the items relating to engineering construction materials. Alphabetical arrangement of a large number of raw and fabricated materials used in the various industries

"To call a smallish handbook 'An Encyclopedia for Purchasing Agents, Engineers, Executives and Foremen' seems offhand a rather strained ambition, but a captious user will find disappointingly little to grumble at when he comes to resort to it. A skillful economy of words affords place not only for the information essential to its chosen audience but also for many desirable secondary data. This audience is then likely to be thankful that its informant is at least not encyclopedic in bulk." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

Clapp, William Howard, 1874- and Clark, Donald Sherman
Engineering materials and processes; metals and plastics. Int. textbook 1938 543p illus (International texts in mechanical engineering) $4.50 620.1

1 Building materials. 2 Engineering 3 Machine shop practice 4 Metals 5 Plastic materials (W) 38-11827

"This concise work, based on a sophomore course at the California Institute of Technology, treats of the properties and limitations of metals and alloys as well as of foundry and machine shop procedure. A brief chapter on plastics is included. There are references at the chapter endings." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

George, Sidney Gonzales, and Rettger, Ernest William, 1871-
Mechanics of materials. McGraw 1935 483p illus $3.75 620.1

1 Strength of materials 35-5852

"A textbook covering the essential topics of a first course in this subject intended for students of engineering in American universities. The treatment aims to be simple and complete." Civil engineering

* Johnson's Materials of construction, rewritten and rev. by M. O. Withey, and James Aston. 8th ed Wiley 1939 xxii, 867p illus $6 620.1

1 Building materials 2 Strength of materials 39-24834

This eighth edition includes, in chapters 1-3, new definitions, formulae, information on elastic break down, also new information on properties and methods of testing timber, stone, clay products, cement, mortar and concrete, alloys, steel, cast iron, etc. A new chapter on metals for lightweight construction has been added

"Widely known as a text and reference book. Discusses the general nature of deformation and stress and a number of appliances for measuring deformations." Detroit

Laurson, Philip Gustave, 1885- and Cox, William Junkin, 1896-
Mechanics of materials. Wiley 1938 408p illus $3.75 620.1

1 Building materials 2 Strength of materials (W) 38-29940

"A basic text in this field. The first fifteen chapters constitute a minimum course for engineering students. The last eight chapters contain more advanced or more specialized material. According to the preface, the physical behavior of stressed bodies has been emphasized, as well as the mathematical expression of this behavior. Both the doubled integration of the elastic curve and the area-moment method of deflection are fully presented. Recent advances in the theory of columns and in column design are included. There are over five hundred problems graded as to difficulty. Unusually complete tables are said to make reference to a steel handbook unnecessary." Industrial arts index

1 Building materials 2 Chemistry, Technical 31-5162

First published 1917 with title: "Chemistry of materials of the machine age." Revised 1925. The present edition has been enlarged by over one hundred pages; contains additional material on hydrogenation of coal, industrial uses of magnesium and cadmium and recent developments in cellulose nitrate lacquers

"A textbook for technical schools, considering from the standpoint of the user the chemistry of water, fuels, refractory materials, iron and steel, nonferrous materials and alloys, foundry sands, building stones, lime and gypsum products, cement, clay and its products, paints, varnishes, lubricants, glue, rubber, insulating materials, etc." Cleveland

Mangold, John Frederic, 1884-
Practical mechanics of motion. McGraw 1935 263p illus $2 620.1

1 Mechanics, Applied 35-9218

A simple treatment of mechanics, planned for technical workers, trade schools, and colleges offering short courses in the subject. "A large amount of basic theory has been developed, and applications have been made to problems many of which will come within the range of experience of any students." Preface

Strength of materials; a text-book for secondary schools; rev. by Thaddeus Merriman. 7th ed rev and reset Wiley 1928 204p illus $1.75 620.1

1 Strength of materials 28-16197

A good school text written "for the purpose of enabling the student to readily acquire a rational knowledge of the fundamentals of the 'strength of materials.'" First published 1897. In this latest edition new articles on Portland cement and concrete have been added and other additions have been made to increase the size by 35 pages. Mathematics beyond elementary physics and geometry not needed

Moore, Herbert Fisher, 1875-

1 Building materials 39-30262

"To supply the student-beginner in engineering with a birds' eye view of the field of materials, laying special emphasis on iron and steel." Coventry. Public libraries

"The author has one major advantage over the men who undertook to revise the older texts in that he starts with a clean sheet and with no text or cuts standing which must be salvaged if possible. The effect is a thoroughly modern treatment." Engineering news

620.2 Engineering—Handbooks

Eshbach, Ovid Wallace, 1893-
(ed.) Handbook of engineering fundamentals. Wiley 1936 1098p illus (Wiley engineering handbook ser.) $5, college ed $4 620.2

1 Engineering—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 36-22508

"An interesting and useful reference book has been produced by segregating from various current engineering handbooks the sections dealing with 'fundamentals,' that is, mathematics, physics, chemistry, mechanics, data on materials, and the like. The resulting 'Handbook of Engineering Fundamentals' is rather formidable in bulk, but it will be found to contain many items of information not always conveniently available. While the completeness of the information given in some instances is apt to prove disappointing, this perhaps is difficult to avoid in a condensed reference manual." Engineering news-record

1 Civil engineering—Handbooks, manuals, etc. 30-8145

"This edition closely follows the plan and the scope of the first four editions of which the late Mansfield Merriman was Editor-in-Chief. The present edition has been thoroughly revised and brought up to date. Much new matter has been added, many new cuts have been included and the entire work has been reset. Compared with the Fourth Edition the number of pages has been increased from 1995 to 2263." Preface to fifth edition

"It is the book which, more than any other, gives ready information on every phase of civil engineering. Each section, prepared by an expert in his particular subject, contains the most authoritative and most reliable data available." Engineers and engineering

O'Rourke, Charles Edward

(ed.) General engineering handbook. 2d ed McGraw 1940 1120p illus $4 620.2

1 Engineering—Handbooks, manuals, etc.

First published 1932. In the second edition some of the more highly specialized sections of the first edition have been omitted in order to expand fundamental sections such as those on mathematics, materials, mechanics and hydraulics. More complete discussions of structural design, engineering thermodynamics and electrical engineering principles have been added

"Divided into [19] sections dealing concisely with the materials used in general, civil, mechanical, and electrical engineering. A bibliography is included at end of [most of the] sections. Numerous tables, diagrams and illustrations." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"The purpose is not to supplant the detailed and voluminous handbooks devoted to special branches of engineering, but to supply a compact reference work of important fundamentals for all engineers. . . It has been assumed that the users of the book are familiar with general engineering theory and practice." Preface

1 Civil engineering 40-13357

First published 1934. The 2d edition takes into account the present practice and changes of the past six years

"Comprehensive, compact work in ten sections, each by a specialist. It presents both theory and practice and covers surveying, railway and highway engineering, mechanics of materials, hydraulics, stresses in framed structures, steel design, concrete, foundations, sewerage and sewage disposal, and water supply and purification. Bibliographies at chapter endings. Excellent index." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

1 Reports—Preparation 38-5559

"This work 'is a record of current practice according to the best practitioners.' The first edition (1924), stressing scientific and engineering reports, is now expanded by 110 pages to include economics and business. A large part of the text has been rewritten, and most of the old illustrations have been replaced. Many sample reports are given." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Preparation of scientific and technical papers. 3d ed Williams & Wilkins 1936 125p illus $1.50 620.7

1 Authorship 2 Technology—Language 32-22932

New edition of a work originally published 1925. The 1936 edition is eight pages longer than the second due to the introduction of brief suggestions on punctuation, on presentation of ideas, on making the article interesting and on prepublication revision

"Is not concerned with sources of information, but with matters of form, style, and arrangement. For this purpose it is a valuable manual which may be profitably consulted by writers of theses and reports, and papers for the technical and trade press. The principles set forth are applicable to a broader field than purely scientific writing, and some instruction in the material it contains should be included in every college course." Pittsburgh

620.9 Engineering—History

The following recommended titles covering various phases of the history of engineering will be of interest in special libraries:

Gest, A. P. Engineering. Longmans 1930 221p (Our debt to Greece and Rome) $2 Traces the influence of the Greek and Roman engineering works upon the engineering of our day

"Interesting lectures delivered to young people and adults at the Royal Institution of Great Britain. The author describes the chief kinds of engines (except electric) and shows how simple are the scientific principles upon which their action depends. Steam, reciprocating, turbine, internal combustion, and refrigerating engines are explained clearly and thoroughly for readers without technical education. While he uses English engines chiefly, as examples, he shows a wide knowledge of American engineering." N.Y. libraries

1 Pumping machinery 2 Steam power plants 22-10855

"Treats of the selection and installation of the necessary auxiliary equipment for a steam power plant. The book is divided into thirteen divisions, each of which deals with some particular phase, i.e. pump calculations, direct-acting steam pumps, crank-action pumps, centrifugal and rotary pumps, injectors, boiler-feeding apparatus (pump governors), feed-water heaters, fuel economizers, condensers, methods of recooling condensing water, steam piping of power plants, live-steam and exhaust-steam separators, and steam traps. Numerous problems are given throughout the text, with detailed solutions of these problems forming an appendix." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"New, revised and enlarged edition of an excellent work on steam power plant engineering, which appeared in 1917. . . In the present edition, the refrigeration section and the volume designation have been abandoned. This is a good reference book in its field, and the author believes that 'the subjects of steam generators, engines and turbines are covered so that it may be advantageously employed for student courses in place of separate texts on these subjects.' 'It is assumed that the reader has completed elementary courses in thermodynamics, applied mechanics and chemistry.'" Donald Hendry

621.31 Generation of electricity. Electric machinery

Five good books on their respective subjects which are noted here for the benefit of special libraries or larger libraries needing this material are:

Harwood, P. B. Control of electric motors. Wiley 1936 390p illus $4.50 Describes briefly the characteristics of various types of electric motors and explains how these characteristics are used for control purposes

Hayes, S. Q. Switching equipment for power control. 2d ed McGraw 1927 556p illus $5 Describes American practice in the selection, installation and upkeep of switch gear employed for electric power control

Lawrence, R. R. Principles of alternating-current machinery. 3d ed McGraw 1940 678p illus (Electrical engineering texts) $5.50 An advanced textbook

Morecroft, J. H. and Hehre, F. W. Electrical circuits and machinery. Wiley 1925-33 3v v 1 $4, v2 $4.50, v3 $2 Contents: v 1 Continuous currents. 2d ed 1933; v2 Alternating currents. 3d ed 1933; v3 Experiments. 1925

Underhill, C. R. Coils and magnet wire; a practical treatise on coil windings, magnet wires, insulating materials and the details and phenomena associated with the design, manufacture and operation of coils in general. McGraw 1925 494p illus $4

Annett, Fred Anzley
* Electrical machinery; a practical study course on installation, operation and maintenance. 2d ed McGraw 1938 429p illus $3 621.31
1 Electric machinery (W) 38-33937

"A practical study course on installation, operation, and maintenance. The edition reflects the vast changes made during the seventeen years since publication of the first edition. There is new information on megohm meters; methods of setting the brushes on commutators; three-wire circuits and generators; transformers and alternating-current motors; electron tubes and mercury-arc rectifiers. About 100 pages of new material are said to be included." Industrial arts index

Annett, Fred Anzley, and Roe, Arthur Cecil, 1891-
Connecting and testing direct-current machines. 2d ed McGraw 1937 302p illus $3 621.31
1 Electric machinery—Direct current 37-1501

"Because much of the material in the first edition is basic and subject to little change, the chief revision lies in the addition of six chapters. Some of the subjects added are changes in insulation to increase machine ratings, test methods, and insulation-resistance measurements." Bkl.
"A practical book describing the various kinds of windings on direct-current machines, the operations in rewinding and in reconnecting, and the tests for troubles in armature windings, such as grounds, short circuits and other faults. Useful to repairmen as well as to winding experts." Pratt Technical books

"A textbook for electrical engineering students who are beginning work with electrical machinery. Particular attention is given to the methods of presenting armature windings, armature reaction, and commutation. Many problems of varying degrees of difficulty are included. Drawings, tables, and a few photographs." Bkl.
Includes bibliographies

Croft, Terrell Williams, 1880-
* Electrical machinery; principles, operation, and management; rev. by G. H. Hall. 4th ed McGraw 1938 394p illus $3 621.31
1 Electric machinery 38-9737

Since the last edition in 1929 the book has been completely revised. This entailed a review of the principles of construction and care of electrical machinery. New types and improvements of individual motors have been stressed, recent designs of multispeed motors included and considerable material added on mercury-arc power rectifiers. Two chapters on the modification of commercial motors and the field of motor applications have replaced the former one on electric elevators
"Avoiding the use of difficult mathematics, this well known author aims to explain to the 'average' man the theoretical principles and the essential operating facts relating to alternating-current and direct-current generators as well as to motors and similar machinery, with consideration of control apparatus. Design is not discussed. There are chapters on troubles, testing, and the determination of motor drive requirements. There are clear cut illustrations and practical examples with solutions." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

The authors are professors in the Kansas State College and the State University of Iowa, respectively." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Kraehenbuehl, John Otto, 1894- and Faucett, Max Albert, 1899-
Circuits and machines in electrical engineering. Wiley 1939 691p illus $4.50 621.31

1 Electric circuits 2 Electric engineering 3 Electric machinery 39-4032

"Intended for non-electrical engineering students who take electrical engineering as a secondary subject. By combining the concepts of alternating current and direct current they find it easier to develop the subject with less repetition and confusion. Stress is placed on physical analysis rather than on mathematical derivations, and the subject is, on the whole, treated qualitatively. The calculus has been sparingly used and demonstration problems and figures have been kept simple. Many problems for solution are given at the chapter endings." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Direct and alternating currents, theory and machinery. 2d ed McGraw 1938 730p illus $4.50 621.31

1 Electric currents 2 Electric machinery 38-14560

In the second edition of this book some material has been omitted. Considerable new material has been added including discussions of the universal and capacitor motors, the power-factor meter, the frequency meter, the stroboscope, and the oscillograph. The discussion of synchronous machines has been considerably amplified. The chapter on electronic tubes has been entirely rewritten. The lists of problems at the ends of the several chapters have been completely revised

"Intended, primarily, for students desiring a short survey course in the theory of the electric circuit and the operating principles of electric machines. . . For the most part, mathematical discussions are either omitted or reduced to simple forms." General electric review

Magnusson, Carl Edward, 1872-
Alternating currents. 5th ed McGraw 1939 721p illus $5 621.31

1 Electric currents, Alternating 39-17084

"In order to include the many important advances made in the electric-power field during this period, the size of the book has been increased from 520 to 721 pages, but it was not found necessary or even desirable, to change the order and form of presentation. In essence the book presents in systematic order and logical sequence the basic principles of alternating currents and their application to electric-power engineering under 1939 conditions." Preface to the fifth edition

* Essentials of alternating currents. 2d ed completely rewritten. . . Wiley 1939 377p illus $2.25 621.31

1 Electric currents, Alternating 39-8556

"The first edition, published in 1919. . . The preface states that this edition has been expanded to include the operating principles of recent devices, such as static condensers for power, factor connection, rectifying devices, and small capacity motors." Bkl.

"Many practical men have forgotten much of the mathematics they studied at school, so the authors devote themselves to simplifying the mathematical wording as much as possible and giving graphical methods which, with the help of simple numerical tables, enable them to solve most of the practical problems they come across with the minimum of labour. The chapters on motors, starters and controllers, and on converters and rectifiers will be found useful to many." Nature

Winding alternating-current motor coils. McGraw 1938 281p illus $3 621.31

1 Electric coils 2 Electric motors (W) 38-33344

"It is the purpose of this book to present as simply as possible practical information that will enable engineers and repairmen to modernize older types of alternating-current motors and generators by redesigning and rebuilding their windings as well as replace burned-out or defective windings in present-day designs. With some of the older types of machines the reduction of losses that can be obtained through the use of a modern winding will pay for the job in less than a year. . . The last chapter presents the latest information available on the properties and applications of the glass-fabric insulating materials that have recently been developed." Preface

1 Electric power plants 37-33091

First published 1917. In the 1937 edition new material relating to the development of turbines, the net work system, etc. has been added. Terminology has also been brought up to date

"Considers the generation, transmission and distribution of electrical energy. Written in a practical style for the man with limited technical training or knowledge of mathematics. Numerous examples with solutions are provided to explain the text." Pratt tech.

Morrow, Lester William Wallace

Electric power stations. McGraw 1927 326p illus $4 621.312

1 Electric power plants 27-1774

"Copiously diagramed text dealing exclusively with stations operated by steam. Discusses the selection of site, fuels, fuel and ash handling, steam generation and utilization, auxiliary energy supply and heat balance systems, boiler room equipment and layout, turbines and turbine auxiliaries, electrical layout and equipment and switching practice." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"A sound discussion of the fundamental principles of production, transmission and distribution of electrical energy on a large scale in an economical manner." Electric railway journal

Morse, Frederick T.

Power plant engineering and design. . . Van Nostrand 1932 813p $6.50 621.312

1 Electric power plants 32-35635

"A text for engineers and students of engineering covering the theory and practice of stationary electric generating plants." Subtitle

"Treats of the design, construction and operation of electric power plants for public service, industrial and institutional purposes, economic features being also considered. Steam, Diesel, and hydroelectric power are included. Presupposes a working knowledge of heat power, and thermodynamics, hydraulics, and an elementary knowledge of alternating currents on the part of the student." Donald Hendry

621.314 Stationary induction apparatus

L. F. Blume has edited "Transformer engineering" (Wiley 1938 496p illus $5) which discusses for engineers and advanced students the theory, operation and application of transformers. Each chapter has been written by an expert in the field

Coon, Horace
American tel & tel; the story of a great monopoly. Longmans 1939 276p $3 621.385
1 American telephone and telegraph company 39-29428
"From its invention by Alexander Graham Bell, the author traces the development of the telephone into the giant monopoly it is today. Government ownership is discussed, the interests of stockholders versus subscribers are considered, and the closing chapter is devoted to the question of regulation, but on the whole, this is not a muck-raking work." Wis. bul.
"Mr. Coon offers a simpler and shorter story [than Danielian's] with vivid human interest values in sketches of men like Bell and Vail. It is easier to read, but perhaps less intellectually exciting than the brilliantly detailed fact masses, ordered with clarity and progression, on which Mr. Danielian plants his question marks." Elements of mechanism. 5th ed Wiley 1938 400p illus $3.50 621.8
1 Kinematics 2 Mechanics 38-13570

Changes in the fifth edition consist of more thoro discussion of the laws of motion, new examples replacing old ones, rearrangement of the order of chapters, placing all problems applying to a given chapter at the end of that chapter

"Intended primarily to give the student familiarity with, and practice in thinking about, the application of the fundamental principles of physics and simple mathematics in a specific field, namely, the field of mechanical movements. The purpose is not to describe a large number of different devices, but rather to select the relatively more common and more fundamental machine elements and study their motions when combined in certain definite ways." Preface

1 Machinery—Design 38-16733

"Discusses the theory involved in the design of machine elements and includes chapters on materials, factors of safety, utilization factors, and the selection of design stresses. Some training in kinematics, mechanics, and factory processes is expected of the student. A few design problems have been worked out in detail while at the end of the volume are numerous exercises for class or home work." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Third edition in preparation, 1939

"Deals exclusively with American practice, and it does not differ very greatly from the first edition, although more emphasis is put upon the importance of using idler pulleys with anti-friction bearings." Engineer

"This is intended to be a practical book. It is not a mere restatement of what already appears in trade advertisements, nor does it contain descriptions of installations of conveying and elevating machinery. It aims rather to explain principles and the reasons for doing things." Preface to first edition

Koshkin, Simeon John
Modern materials handling. Wiley 1932 488p illus $6 621.86

1 Conveying machinery 32-18833

"Methods and appliances for handling all kinds of material, entering into details of principles and considerations involved in choice of method of handling various kinds of material. Useful reference for engineers concerned with designing and installing materials handling equipment, and to students. Costs of installation and operation are included. Literature references in footnotes." Donald Hendry

"The treatment of the different subjects has been from the point of view of the practical elevator man, and the equipment dealt with covers a wide range of subjects. For those who are associated with elevator problems, the book should find a wide field of usefulness and help fill a long-felt need for such a work." Power

621.89 Lubrication and lubricants

In addition to the titles entered in this class the following titles are recommended:

Kalichevsky, V. A. Modern methods of refining lubricating oils. Reinhold 1938 235p illus (American chemical society, Monograph ser.) $6

1 Lubrication and lubricants 2 Machinery 39-22555
"A practical work for buyers, sellers, and users of lubricants and for those who design and operate machinery. Although more than one-half of the text deals with the source, production, and refining of lubricants, and the theory of lubrication, it does not delve into the highly special phases of such topics. The rest of the book has to do with the lubrication of ball and roller bearings, steam turbines, steam engines, air compressors, refrigerating machines, and internal combustion engines. There is a chapter on handling and storage. Tho illustrations, numbering more than 300, are mostly line drawings." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Klemgard, Edwin Neal, 1901-
Lubricating greases; their manufacture and use. Reinhold 1937 873p illus $15 621.89
1 Lubrication and lubricants 38-180
First published 1927. The 1937 edition of nearly 900 pages is more than five times the size of the earlier edition. It records many of the important advances having to do with automotive greases, wheel bearing greases, steering gear lubricants, water pump greases, hypoid gear greases, and extreme pressure gear lubricants, as well as the most important developments in industrial lubricants
"In this work will be found the results of many years of research with the largest manufacturers of lubricants in this country, much of which has never before been printed. While the book does not pretend to be exhaustive, it does contain a fairly comprehensive exposition of the theory, manufacture and application of lubricating greases." Preface

American lubricants from the standpoint of the consumer. 3d ed Chemical pub. co. 1927 408p illus $5 621.89
1 Lubrication and lubricants 27-19135
"The second edition appeared in 1920. The present revision is enlarged by 66 pages and brings the matter to date. Intended as an aid to buyers and users of lubricants in the selection of the proper lubricating oil or grease for a given purpose. Describes the various lubricants, their sources, preparation and uses, and the physical and chemical methods of testing. Chapters are devoted to the lubrication of internal combustion engines, automobiles, electrical machinery, steam cylinders and engines, steam railways, textile mills, etc. Addressed to manufacturers of lubricants, lubricating engineers, salesmen, mill and power plant superintendents and others interested." Donald Hendry

"The text is written so that the beginning toolmaker is led from the simple facts about his personal tools and the equipment which the shop provides, to the processes of the toolmaker's craft. This is done through the presentation of many typical jobs. The jobs are presented as finished working drawings and the tools which they represent may be made from these drawings. The information which the drawings supply, and the study of the drawings themselves, will make an important contribution to the training of any toolmaker. The section on Production Tools is especially valuable for the toolmaker with some experience." Preface

Structural design. Wiley 1938 254p illus $3.50 624

1 Building, Iron and steel 2 Structures, Theory of (W) 38-16840

"Professor Bishop in preparing for his book had the structural engineering student and his need for fundamental knowledge in mind. His approach, based on many years of teaching the subject, is to apply the fundamental principles of design first to detached individual members without regard to their relation to other members in the structure. This permits classroom design of many similar problems before the student is called upon to apply the fundamentals to the design of more complete structures where the interdependence of the different members must be taken into account. The book places considerable emphasis on the design of plate girders, and in the end the student is introduced to the design procedures necessary for bridges, multi-story buildings and industrial buildings." First published 1916. In the fifth edition "rewriting, rearrangement, and a fair amount of new material bring this text-book up to date." Bkl.

"As a whole, the book is concise and well arranged. It gives data that will be of great assistance to the student and will make an exceedingly valuable book of reference for the engineer who has the actual charge of designing and constructing roads and pavements. It is a desirable addition to existing highway literature and no highway engineer's library will be complete without it." Engineering record

First published 1934. In the second edition, advances in highway engineering practice since 1934 are recorded. A new feature is the insertion of questions and problems prepared by T. F. Hickerson in collaboration with R. M. Trimble
This "text on highway design and construction takes on the character of a treatise rather than a manual or textbook. The wise plan adopted by the author of submitting his manuscript to the practical teacher for careful editing with the needs of the college student in mind, however, has added textbook value to a volume naturally produced for the practicing engineer by a practicing engineer." "The first edition of this text was published in 1928 and was prepared for use in college courses in highway engineering. It is not intended as a complete handbook of reference; instead, material was selected with the special needs of students in mind. The general plan of the author was not to follow the chronological procedure of actual highway work, but to pursue a logical sequence of instruction. This second edition, a complete modernization of the first, follows the same plan. The text has been thoroughly revised and parts have been entirely rewritten." Better roads

629.13 AERONAUTICS. AERIAL NAVIGATION

Books on aeronautics are difficult to select as some of them go out of date soon. When possible, it is well to have expert advice in the selection of the books

Biographies of aviators will be found listed in class 92 and descriptions of aeronautic voyages in the travel part of this catalog. See in index the subjects Aviators, and Aeronautics—Flights

There are many government publications dealing with aeronautics which are available at low prices. Such as the "Civil aeronautics bulletin" issued by The Civil aeronautic authority. The National aeronautics council also issues bulletins and manuals at low prices

In addition to the titles entered in this class the following titles are recommended:

629.13 Almen, H. V. and Mead, R. K. Aircraft blueprint reading. Pitman 1940 124p illus $1

Falk, K. H. Aircraft propeller handbook. Ronald 1937 99p illus $4

Gregg, W. R. Aeronautical meteorology. 2d ed rev and enl Ronald 1930 405p illus $4.50

Loudy, F. E. Metal airplane structures. Henley 1938 455p illus $5 Discusses the design and construction of nearly every type of metal construction used in airplanes

Magoun, F. A. and Hodgins, Eric. History of aircraft. McGraw 1931 xx,495p illus (Whittlesey house publications) o.p. 1939

630 AGRICULTURE

To supplement the books listed below in 630 and subdivisions the publications of the United States Department of agriculture are valuable. In this catalog no attempt has been made to make a selection of these publications. The various Price lists issued by the Superintendent of documents give lists of those available. They are also listed by subject in the "Agricultural index" (class 050) The pamphlets obtainable on many subjects will sometimes take the place of books in small libraries

For books on farm buildings, see class 728.6

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

Finch, V. C. and Baker, O. E. Geography of the world's agriculture. Supt. of doc. 1917 149p illus maps $1 A publication of the U.S. Department of agriculture

King, F. H. Farmers of forty centuries; or, Permanent agriculture in China, Korea and Japan; ed. by J. P. Bruce. Harcourt [1926] 379p illus maps o.p. 1939

1 Agriculture 2 Soils 30-15718

First edition, 1924, has title: "Crop production and soil management." In this edition the text has been revised and the subject of soil management treated more briefly

An inclusive book for vocational schools, colleges or practical farmers. Special emphasis is given to methods for the northern and cornbelt states. Pt. 1 deals with the principles and operations connected with growing crops and maintaining soil fertility; pt. 2, with specific crops, to each of which a chapter is given. The crops treated are corn, wheat, oats, rye, barley, buckwheat, flax, sorghum, potatoes, sugarbeets, cabbages, beans, clover, alfalfa and hay. A final chapter is on crop exhibits and judging contests

1 Agriculture—Economic aspects 2 Agriculture—U.S. 3 Natural resources 4 U.S.—Economic conditions 35-27422

"An essayist with something new to say is Paul B. Sears of the University of Oklahoma, whose book tells how men destroy crops and soil to their own detriment. Nature, Mr Sears says, has a certain botanical or biological balance, which the ill-controlled and often inexpert processes of men, whether pioneer settlers or residents of indefinite tenure, sometimes rudely disrupt . . . Productive soil becomes a desert, and thus the history of continents may be a chronicle of deserts on the march." Springfield Republican

"It is vividly written, too brightly indeed at times, for Professor Sears indulges not infrequently in irrelevant obiter dicta. He looks to the forest and prairie for safety, but without the farm land how can the people be fed?" Times (London) lit. sup.

631 THE FARM

631.1 Farm economics

In addition to the titles entered in this class the following titles are recommended:

App, Frank, and Waller, A. G. Farm economics, management and distribution; ed. by R. W. Gregory. 3d rev ed Lippincott 1938 700p illus maps (Lippincott's farm manuals) $3

Forster, G. W. Farm organization and management. Prentice-Hall 1938 432p illus $3 A textbook which discusses farm economics and sound farm practices

Adams, Richard Laban, 1883-
Farm management; a text-book for student, investigator, and investor. McGraw 1921 xx,671p illus (McGraw-Hill agricultural and biological pub.) $4 631.1

1 Agriculture 2 Farms 21-21879

"Considers the various factors entering into the business of farming: farm selection, soils, equipment and buildings, capital, bookkeeping and accounting, costs, marketing, labor, tenancy, farm law, management, etc. Especially addressed to the beginner and the settler in new sections." Donald Hendry

Holmes, Clarence Leroy, 1879-
Economics of farm organization and management. Heath 1928 422p (Agricultural commerce and administration ser.) $2.80 631.1

1 Agriculture—Economic aspects 28-1716

"An introductory text in the field of agricultural economics. Written for college use, but suitable for anyone who wishes to begin the study of agricultural economics . . . in a serious way." Wis. bul.

"Dr. Holmes's training in economic theory plus his concrete experience in conducting research at the Iowa Experiment Station has admirably fitted him to write such a book. On the one hand he introduces the student to very rigorous and involved economic theory and, on the other, he presents the material so as to make it easily understandable. This book is a valuable contribution to the teaching of economics in the colleges of agriculture." American journal of science

McWilliams, Carey
Factories in the field; the story of migratory farm labor in California. Little 1939 334p $2.50 631.1

1 Agricultural laborers 2 California—Economic conditions 3 Labor and laboring classes—California (W) 39-27674

A story of eighty years of land grabbing and farm-labor exploitation which supplements factually Mr Steinbeck's dramatic picture of the same condition as told in "Grapes of wrath." Bibliography

1 Agriculture 2 Agriculture—Economic aspects 3 Land tenure 31-8659

First published 1919, revised 1925. The present edition has been slightly enlarged to cover the important progress which has taken place in the field of cooperation, the federal marketing services and the new public policies relating to the share of agriculture in the national income

"This book is intended to help farmers understand the principles which underlie the choice of a farm, the selection of crop and live-stock enterprises, the management of labor and equipment and the organization of these elements into an efficient concern that will yield a profit." Preface

631.18 Farm produce—Marketing

A. W. McKay and C. H. Lane's "Practical cooperative marketing" (Wiley 1928 512p illus maps o.p. 1939) is a text intended for students of vocational agriculture in schools and farmers

Arnold, Schuyler

"A useful book on the popular wayside marketing-stands. Tells how to select a suitable site, how to build and equip an attractive booth, how to handle sales properly, how to grow produce for the booth, and much more useful information. Illustrated with sketches by the author, and pictures of booths." Ontario library review

Clark, Fred Emerson, 1890- and Weld, Louis Dwight Harvell, 1882-
Marketing agricultural products in the United States. Macmillan 1932 672p $4.50 631.18

1 Farm produce—Marketing 32-1360

"Based on Weld's The Marketing of Farm Products, the present volume includes the many developments which have taken place since its predecessor appeared in 1916, and brings together into usable form a mass of scattered information on the theoretical and practical aspects of the subjects; of interest to college students of food economics and marketing." Journal of home economics

"Marketing Agricultural Products by Clark and Weld is destined to have an important place in marketing literature. Though the original work by Weld furnished the basic approach and method of treatment for the new volume, Clark and Weld are justified in giving the present book a different title, since it is virtually a new piece of writing. . . . Anyone interested in agricultural marketing should have this book in his library for reference." Harvard business review

Comish, Newel Howland, 1888-
Cooperative marketing of agricultural products. Appleton-Century 1929 xxii, 479p $3.50 631.18

1 Agriculture, Cooperative 2 Farm produce—Marketing 29-18383

"The history, methods, and problems of cooperative marketing of farm products, with chapters devoted to citrus fruits, apples, dried fruits, vegetables, cheese, milk, poultry, grain, wool, cotton, tobacco and live stock. An account of farmers' organizations is also included." Chicago

Includes a bibliography and a number of tables

631.3 Farm machinery

A. A. Stone's "Farm machinery" (2d ed Wiley 1934 466p illus $3) in the Wiley farm series is a practical textbook on the use, adjustment and repair of farm machinery

Productive soils; the fundamentals of successful soil management and profitable crop production; ed. by R. W. Gregory. [4th ed] Lippincott 1938 325p illus maps $2 631.4

1 Soils 38-4997

First published 1920. "In this 1937 revision, care has been taken to have this text include subject matter that is receiving attention in agricultural courses generally. All tables and factual statements have been checked, views have been brought up to date, and a new chapter on soil conservation has been added, which chapter covers all the essential points in this field of endeavor." Preface

"Authoritative general work on successful soil management and profitable crop production, couched in clear and fairly simple language which the average farmer can understand. Numerous illustrations and tables add to value of the discussion of fertilization, irrigation and rotation of crops." N.Y. state lib.

Soil science; its principles and practice; including basic processes for managing soils and improving their fertility. Lippincott 1936 615p illus $3.50 631.4

1 Agriculture 2 Soils 36-14294

"A discussion of the development of agriculture from the time primitive people first cultivated the ground for food crops to the present time, and full treatment of the nature of soils—physical, chemical, and biological—of the fundamentals of a scientific classification of soils, and of the vital relationship between soils and growing plants." Preface

1 Entomologists 2 Insects, Injurious and beneficial 31-26165

"After fifty years as entomologist in the service of the government, the author has gathered together here a great mass of information on the development of the movement for the control of insect pests. Accounts of American entomologists and of their achievements from early colonial days to the present are followed by short summaries of what is being done in other countries. The work in medical entomology and the practical use of predatory and parasitic insects are also reviewed. A contribution." Bkl.

Insect menace. Appleton-Century 1931 347p illus $3.50 632.7

1 Insects, Injurious and beneficial 31-24018

"Recent experiences with the corn borer, the fruit fly, and the grasshopper give weight to the author's argument that we are faced with a growing insect menace. . . His discussion of the problem and of preventive measures should carry weight." Wis. bul.

"Dr. Howard's half a century of study of insects has stored his mind with a marvelous treasure and his book is for the layman a fresh wonderland." N.Y. Times

"A text-book for high schools and agricultural colleges and a manual for farmers, fruit growers, vegetable growers, and others interested in protecting vegetation and farm animals from pests. Describes the various pests and the nature of the damage produced by them, and tells how to destroy them. Contains a chapter on the relation of birds to agriculture. . . [Many] illustrations, four colored plates." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

633 FIELD CROPS

A few books on individual crops are noted in this catalog. Libraries needing more special books should consult their state agricultural college for the book best suited to the locality

Hutcheson, Thomas Barksdale, 1882- Wolfe, Thomas Kennerly, 1892- and Kipps, Michael Smith
Production of field crops; a textbook of agronomy. 2d ed McGraw 1936 445p illus (McGraw-Hill publications in the agricultural and botanical sciences) $3.50 633

1 Agriculture 36-35961

First published 1924. In the 2d edition the size of the publication has been reduced in order to fit the requirements of a one-semester subject. Fewer illustrative tables have been used. Lists of questions have been added at the end of each chapter
An excellent text which discusses first the fundamentals of field crop production then the individual crops. Aims to cover a wide field for a standard course in field crops. References at the end of each chapter

633.1 Corn

H. A. Wallace and E. N. Bressman's "Corn and corn growing" (4th ed rev Wiley 1937 436p illus $2.75) is a good book on this subject for libraries needing one

633.2 Forage plants

Piper, Charles Vancouver, 1867-1926
Forage plants and their culture. rev ed Macmillan 1924 xxv,671p illus (Rural text-book ser.) $4.20 633.2

1 Forage plants 24-19859

In this edition "the effort has been made to incorporate all the important new knowledge contributed in the past nine years. . . The statistical information is based on the census of 1920. There is also appended to each chapter a list of publications important to the student of forage crops in American Agriculture." Preface to the revised edition
"A very thorough and practical discussion, dealing with seeding, culture and harvesting of plants and crops used for forage and for hay." Detroit

633.5 Cotton

H. B. Brown's "Cotton; history, species, varieties, morphology, breeding, culture, diseases, marketing, and uses" (2d ed McGraw 1938 592p illus $5) is a comprehensive text which will be useful if libraries need it

Modern guide to successful gardening. Sun dial. 370p illus 89c 635

1 Gardening 36-4596

First published 1934 by Greenberg

"The book is divided into 50 rather short chapters, and contains information on the stock subjects such as annuals, perennials, roses, rock gardens, lawns, trees, soil, pruning, fertilizers, seed starting, insect and blight control. The author discusses also amateur greenhouses, hotbeds and coldframes, vegetable gardening in its numerous phases, including harvesting and storing, fruit gradens for the small home owner (he urges a greater use of dwarf fruit trees), trees and shrubs that will attract birds, the buying of nursery stock, cover crops, watering, tillage and drainage." Springfield Republican

"It would be difficult to find a more comprehensive volume on gardening than this recent work of Mr. Kains's. He covers a great deal of ground and covers it thoroughly, giving clear instructions and good advice on almost every phase of modern gardening." Foster Rockwell in N.Y. Times

1 Bulbs 2 Floriculture 27-11805

"The author illustrates as well as describes the charming effects to be obtained by use of bulbs in the garden of any size. Instructions are given for the planting and care of bulbs of all kinds, for indoor as well as outdoor blooming." Book rev. digest

J. C. Wister's "Bulbs for American gardens" (Stratford 1930 278p illus $6.50) is a comprehensive and beautifully illustrated book on this subject

Rock gardens; drawings by G. L. Hollrock and the author. Macmillan 1928 86p illus (Home garden handbooks) $1.25 635.9

1 Rock gardens 28-17879

"This book has been written for the home owner who desires to experiment with this fascinating type of garden. A garden wall, steps leading to the house, are some of the suggestions for the small house owner. Careful directions and diagrams are given for the construction of the garden. The author is well known for his works on gardening." Providence

"The directions and suggestions are very practical and are given in detail. This handbook is of real value to one interested in this fascinating form of intimate gardening." Boston Transcript

Weston, Thomas A.
All about flowering bulbs for home and garden. De La Mare 1931 184p illus $2 635.9
1 Bulbs 2 Floriculture 31-18007
A revision of the author's "Bulbs that bloom in the spring" published 1926, with chapters added on summer flowering bulbs and on tender bulbs and roots. Increased in size by about 40 pages. The book is written for the small home owner and contains the essential instructions about varieties and care. Many illustrations, some in color

C. L. Thayer's "Spring flowering bulbs" (Judd 1928 123p illus $1.25) an older book is still useful. It gives the history, description and cultivation of bulbs, and is arranged alphabetically by plant groups

White, Edward Albert, 1872-
* Florist business. Macmillan 1933 426p illus (Rural science ser.) $4 635.9
1 Floriculture 33-11852
The book is based upon the author's "Principles of floriculture" but the entire manuscript has been rewritten and brought up to date. Out of date sections have been deleted and much botanical classification has been omitted. "The aim has been to place emphasis on factors which are of major importance in the production and distribution of florist crops and to record recent developments in the field of floricultural research." Preface

Robert Kift's "Retail flower shop" (De La Mare 1930 328p illus $3.50) is another good book on this specialized subject

Also available from Garden City pub. co. at $1.98
"Mr Wright's book justifies its title. It is a thoroughly practical book, the outcome of experience, mostly his own but broadened also by that of other gardeners. It is also an exceedingly beautiful book, well printed and handsomely made and adorned with copious illustrations." N.Y. Times

R. L. Wright's "Flowers for cutting and decoration" (Dutton 1923 218p illus $4) deals with raising flowers for house decoration and with cutting and arranging flowers

* Story of gardening; from the hanging gardens of Babylon to the hanging gardens of New York. Dodd 1934 475p illus $3 635.9
1 Gardening—History 34-15242
Also available from Garden City pub. co. at $1.79
"Tells the whole history of gardening from the earliest efforts of primitive man with food plants to the terraced gardens of skyscraper apartments. The book deals with all kinds of gardens as they flourished in various eras and countries—Egyptian, Babylonian, Assyrian and Persian gardens, gardening in ancient Greece and Rome, monastic and medieval gardens, Spanish and Arabian gardens, the garden flowering of the Renaissance, English and French gardening, and the rise of gardening in America." Book rev. digest
"Most gardeners have no time and perhaps none have the special fitness of the author, to untangle its long story. Naturally a book that does so, and does it so well, makes delightful reading. It is also beautifully illustrated, competently indexed, and provided with a most useful bibliography." Sat. rev. of lit.

635.96 Flower arrangement

Two other practical books on the same subject are:

Cary, Mrs K. T. and Merrell, Mrs N. D. Arranging flowers throughout the year. Dodd 1933 230p illus $3.50

1 Floral decoration 2 Flowers 13-22680

"Deals first with the history and theory of the subject, then gives explicit directions for some of the simpler forms of arrangement, in each case explaining the underlying reasons. The text is supplemented by diagrammatic illustrations." Cleveland

Ferguson, Donita, 1911- and Sheldon, Roy, 1897-

Fun with flowers; how to arrange yourself and your flowers; with illus. by Jay Warmuth. Houghton 1939 309p illus $2.50 635.96

1 Floral decoration (W) 39-29491

Tells you what to buy when, and how to arrange the flowers you buy; how to make over a corsage; how to budget a garden for penthouse, porch, or patio. The final chapter contains a dilletante's directory, color guide and flower calendar

Hine, Mrs Annabel Whitney (Baggaley) 1886-

Arrangement of flowers. Scribner 1933 147p illus $2.75 635.96

1 Floral decoration 33-7108

"Most attractive arrangements of cut flowers are shown in 42 remarkably good photographic plates. The directions, drawn from Japanese, French and Victorian sources as well as from 'general rules,' cover distinction, relation of flower and container, color harmony and proportion. There are chapters on selecting and growing, care of cut flowers and plans for flower shows." N.Y. libraries

Mrs A. W. B. Hines's "New flower arrangements" (Scribner 1936 159p illus $2.75) which makes use of less common materials such as winter evergreens, tropical plants and dried plants supplements the earlier book

Rockwell, Frederick Frye, 1884- and Grayson, Mrs Esther C.

* Flower arrangement; jacket and line drawings by E. C. Grayson; with a foreword by J. T. Arms. Macmillan 1935 137p illus $3 635.96

1 Floral decoration 35-21517

"A clear and simple exposition of methods of selecting and arranging flowers for home decoration, intended for the amateur. The authors emphasize the importance of design as against material, and set forth the underlying principles of art which must be applied, while warning against a too rigid adherence to hard-and-fast rules. Has a chapter on how to cut and keep flowers. Photographs and line drawings illustrate the text. For all libraries." Wis. bul.

1 Shrubs 37-1073

First published 1928, revised 1931. The 1937 edition shows slight changes

"A very instructive guide to cultivation of shrubs. Describes species and varieties (both native and introduced), points out desirable and objectionable features, gives much attention to propagation, and deals, more fully than any other book on the subject, with soil requirements." Pittsburgh

Book of trees. De La Mare 1932 440p illus o.p. 1939 635.97

1 Tree planting 2 Trees 32-11587

Publisher announces a revised edition late in 1940

"Legends, stories, poems, descriptions of historical trees, discussions of tree repair, street trees, and a variety of related topics form almost one-half of this handbook of miscellaneous information. The remainder of the book consists of descriptions of 'important deciduous trees' and of 'important coniferous trees.' Contains indexes of plant names and topics. Will not take the place of a complete, well arranged reference book." Bkl.

"Its author evidently has not only a comprehensive knowledge of trees but an understanding of them and a brotherly affection for them that enable him to make, somehow, his knowledge very intriguing. . . The volume is copiously, accurately and beautifully illustrated." N.Y. Times

635.98 Greenhouses. Nurseries

Whalers and whaling; the story of the whaling ships up to the present day. Lippincott 1926 248p illus o.p. 1939 639

1 Whaling [26-8699]

"I have endeavored in this volume to present as vivid a picture of whaling ships, and the lives of those serving in them, as I can obtain from contemporary accounts, with the object of showing to the reader, whilst still one sailing ship whaler survives, what were the adventures and enterprise of an industry which forms one of the most romantic sections of maritime history." Preface

Wealth of the sea; illus. with photographs and drawings. Appleton-Century 1927 340p illus $4 639

1 Commercial products 2 Fisheries 3 Shell fish fisheries 27-23377

"The book is a popular presentation of many interesting facts concerning the nature, production and uses of the great variety of commercial products of the sea —fish and fishery products, edible seaweeds, pearls, coral, shellfish, whale products, fur-seal, sponges, etc." Book rev. digest

"The book, which is interestingly written, covers so wide a field that it ought to interest both the general reader and the special student of commercial geography. The survey, however, is so comprehensive that the author obviously could not go extensively into any one of his subjects but has tried merely to give the reader a good general understanding of each one." N.Y. Times

Verrill, Alpheus Hyatt, 1871-

Real story of the whaler; whaling, past and present. Appleton-Century 1923 295p illus maps $3 639

1 Whaling 23-6828

The 1923 edition adds an appendix of 45 pages which includes additional information received since the book was published in 1916

"The book is not written in a glowing or pictorial style. Its first object is to assemble all available facts of significance to the theme. On the other hand, it is keenly alive to the romantic or historic interest of those facts. The result is a volume in which you may learn, in brief compass, much about the history of American whaling, the technique of the trade or the craft, and notable exploits or adventures connected therewith." Nation

"Illustrated with admirable photographs and reproductions of significant pictures and prints, so that the book, interesting as it is, amounts to a popular monograph on the now almost extinct industry." N.Y. Times

1 Home economics—Study and teaching 28-14801

"Considers the place of home economics in the general scheme of modern education, deals with organization of work in various types of schools and presents methods of teaching." Pittsburgh

"It is exhilarating to find a book to which one can give a hearty endorsement such as this text so thoroughly deserves. It has been written as a textbook for special-methods courses in colleges and universities, but will be found readable and suggestive by the teacher already in the classroom. . . . The text gives evidence of careful, discriminating consideration of many materials and points of view, and there is ample evidence that the writers are at home in the fields considered." Economics of the household; its administration and finance. rev ed Macmillan 1935 626p $3.75 647.1

1 Home economics 2 Home economics—Accounting 35-14994

"The revised edition of Dr. Andrews' book, like the original edition [published 1923] covers chiefly the consumption problems of the family and particularly those in relation to the planning and making of expenditures. . . . The chapters of the original edition have been enlarged, brought up to date, and in some cases divided into two. . . There is a new chapter on investments and life insurance and one on household credit and debt. The treatment of the material on each of the subjects is descriptive rather than analytical and is almost encyclopedic in its fulness of detail. Dr. Andrews has brought together in easily available form a great deal of recent material that has hitherto been widely scattered." Journal of home economics

Organized training in business; with a foreword by P. G. Hoffman. 2d ed rev Harper 1937 xxi,350p illus $4 650.7

1 Business education 37-24062

"This book is an attempt to set down answers to some questions regarding the principles which should be used in the organization and administration of training in commercial and industrial enterprises. In its capacity as a consultant in the sales training field, the Research Bureau for Retail Training has been confronted with such questions as: What is training? Who should be trained? Who should do the training? retc). . . Some of this material is scattered through trade and professional magazines and similar publications; much of it exists as 'unrecorded specifics' in the minds and practice of those interested in training. The purpose of this volume is to bring together and evaluate such material." Preface to first edition

Filing theory and practice; the fundamental principles of filing simplified together with complete laboratory practice. 5th ed N.E.H. Hubbard & co. 1933 144p $2.50 651.5

1 Files and filing (Documents) 33-36036

"This is a simple, concise and yet complete elementary text-book designed either for calss room work or self-instruction. Its clever use of illustration makes the book particularly useful to the novice, as does also the concentration on basic principles and avoidance of superfluous discussion. Alphabetic and numeric filing, follow up systems, charging methods, geographic filing and a brief discussion of the Dewey decimal system and the library card catalog, etc., are all clearly discussed and illustrated." M. C. Manley in Library journal

Morris, Richard H.
How to write job-getting letters. Harper 1938 58 numbered leaves pa $1 651.7

1 Applications for position 2 Commercial correspondence 38-13777

"This is a sound guide to the writing of letters which should prove effective in securing positions. In compiling his data, the author interviewed employment and personnel managers of many of the country's leading organizations, and he has based the book largely on their opinions as to what constitutes a correct and forceful letter of application. The illustrative material—notably the 'model letters,' which are actual applications that have secured positions or interviews for the writers—is of unusual interest." Management review

McMurtrie, Douglas Crawford, 1888-

The book; the story of printing & bookmaking. Bowker 1937 xxx,676p illus $4 655.1

1 Books 2 Printing—History [37-32671]

"Mr. McMurtrie's history of printing and bookmaking was begun as a revision of his 'Golden Book,' first published ten years ago. But the author has expanded so much of his material that the result is in many respects an entirely new work, twice the size of the original volume. Printers' marks, for instance, were scarcely alluded to in the 'Golden Book'; here they are given a chapter to themselves, with examples of different kinds popular in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries . . . Book illustration, too, both historical and contemporary, receives much more attention than in the former edition, and the sections on modern typography have been brought up to date. The most striking change, however, is the increased number of reproductions, nearly two hundred in all." Boston

"An interesting book by an eminent authority. . . The author traces the history of writing and printing from the earliest known records to the present time, with references to famous printers and their work, and to the introduction of printing to the New World . . . Contains many reproductions of illustrations." Donald Hendry

"A distinguished bibliophile adds to his previous volumes on a favorite subject this history of bookmaking told thru the lives of the master makers of the book from the fore-runners of Aldus to Cobden-Sanderson and Emery Walker." Book rev. digest

"This new book of Mr. Orcutt's is, like its predecessors, too easily written to be trustworthy as a work of reference without verification. But on the other hand, it shows to the full the gift of the historical novelist who seeks diligently for facts which will invest his history with human interest." Times (London) lit. sup.

First published 1933. In the 2d edition which has been revised in the light of recent advances, entirely new articles have been gathered in the appendix.

Attention has been paid notably to the following topics: After-treatment of negatives and the difficulties in correction methods, the rendering of type faces in gravure, photo-litho plates for offset printing, three- and four-colour printing processes, and colour photography and publicity

"Although Mr. Gamble's book has been written primarily for students of printing, it can be recommended to the business man. . . It contains a good deal of technical information, but this is introduced in such a way that it will not present difficulties to those who are interested in acquiring practical information. There are a number of useful illustrations and diagrams." Times (London) lit. sup.

"The legal aspects of copyright and associated 'literary property' matters of interest to the writer are discussed in this volume. Statutory and international copyrights are studied, as well as plagiarism, remedies for piracy and infringement, libel, contracts, dramatic and motion-picture contracts, and provisions for radio use. Appendixes give copyright regulations, and text of the minimum basic agreement negotiated by the Dramatists' guild." Book rev. digest

"The incidents which Mr. Wittenberg has chosen to illustrate the points of his exposition are so vivid and timely as to give an actual quality of human interest to this book on legal conditions and procedures. But of course the importance of the book lies in its usefulness to every one who may have an interest in literary property and its protection; and that usefulness should be very great." N.Y. Times

657 Bookkeeping. Accounting

Books on accounting for individual industries are not included here, as the average small library will probably not need them. Libraries needing this material are referred to the "Accountant's index" by the American institute of accountants

"Effort has been directed toward clarifying the subject and bringing out the reasoning by which analyses of given conditions are made. Abstract figures are furnished for each step in analysis, up to the explanation of the difference between actual and expected gross profits, with the idea of unfolding progressively the various calculations by means of which the final interpretation of results is affected. Experience teaches that the best way to obtain a grasp of the subject is to follow out some examples in which the features being described appear in definite form." Preface

* Essentials of accounting. Macmillan 1938 xxi,830p illus $5 657
1 Accounting 38-19961
"The primary purpose of this book is to furnish material for an intensive course in the principles of accounting at the undergraduate college level. It is believed that the treatment of the subject will be found sufficiently thoroughgoing to provide a satisfactory foundation for advanced and specialized courses, and at the same time sufficiently comprehensive to meet the needs of those for whom accounting is an ancillary field. The general approach adopted is that which regards accounting as an essential element in the available means of grappling with the complex conditions and problems of the economic structure, in the hope of achieving understanding and securing effective control." Preface

Reitell, Charles Ervin, 1887-
Cost accounting; principles and methods; rev. by C. E. Johnston. 2d ed Int. textbook 1937 425p $3.50 657
1 Cost accounting 37-36880
"In preparing this revised edition the main purpose of the authors was to show that costing for distribution is an essential a part of cost accounting as manufacturing costs. Several chapters on this phase of accounting have been included in the revision, and numerous other chapters have been rewritten." Management review
"The book has been written from so broad a viewpoint that it should be useful to those engaged in any line of manufacturing. The student who has progressed sufficiently to realize the futility of mastering cost work by a mere reading of a text will profit greatly by following through the well chosen examples which Dr. Reitell has drawn from his wide experience." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

1 Bookkeeping 35-1109
First published 1923. "In the present revision of the text, the authors have held to the general plan of development that has been found so satisfactory to users of previous editions. A feature of the text has always been the provision made for the study of ledger accounts, to the exclusion of all other recording devices, until the bookkeeping process, the arithmetical problem that underlies all bookkeeping procedure, has been mastered. Some parts of the text have been entirely rewritten. . . The book has been considerably enlarged by the addition of more exercises and drill material." Preface to third edition

Sanders, Thomas Henry, 1885-

Cost accounting for control. 2d ed completely rev McGraw 1934 517p illus $4 657

1 Cost accounting 34-15253

"This work is the second edition, considerably revised and enlarged, of the book formerly entitled 'Industrial Accounting.' It contains a discussion of the new problems presented under the N.R.A. New material has been added also for the purpose of increasing its usefulness for teaching purposes." Preface

"Professor Sanders has analyzed very ably the present-day cost accounting devices and objectives. The uses and the problems of cost accounting, rather than the practices and the procedures involved in the accumulation of cost data, are stressed. It is not to be inferred that the latter are ignored—they are merely subordinated. This is in decided contrast to many textbooks on cost accounting which emphasize the mechanical aspect of the subject to the neglect of other important phases." Annals Amer. acad.

"The discussion of principles is illuminating. The discriminating treatment of fundamentals of balance-sheet construction is impressive. The numerous illustrations serve well in their explanatory function. Good-will, surplus, accounts receivable, deferred assets, reserves and reserve funds are treated in an unusually satisfactory manner." Amer. econ. rev.

"Despite some attempts at standardization, the financial reports of business concerns vary greatly in form and character, and an adequate treatment of their analysis and interpretation demands considerable attention to detail. The present book succeeds so well that it should be of value to every business man. By a certified public accountant, but written in non-technical language." Pittsburgh

Understanding American business. Macmillan 1939 448p illus (American youth ser.) $2.50 658

1 Business 2 U.S.—Economic conditions (W) 40-143

"Suitable for students in secondary-schools and for other groups who seek this kind of education. . . This book is published in the belief not only that it will improve the general understanding of business and of what it means to all of us, but also that it will increase social consciousness in business." Preface

Owens on business organization and combination. rev ed Prentice-Hall 1938 697p illus $5, text ed $3.75 658

1 Business 2 Corporation law 3 Corporations 38-16742

"This book is a study of simple, or independent, types of business enterprise, such as the single proprietorship, the partnership, the joint stock company, the Massachusetts trust, and the corporation, and the interrelated and more complicated forms of business organization in which the simpler types are the constituent units. . . It is hoped that through the discussion of these various forms of organization and combination, the student may obtain a picture of business as it is organized and conducted in America today." Preface

"An outstanding merit of the book is clarity of expression, aided by the device of numerous sub-headings each of which sets forth concisely a proposition which the succeeding passages elaborate and qualify. . . . Dr. Owens has avoided the extreme over-simplification on the legal side . . . yet achieves definiteness in enunciating prevailing rules of law, and pointing out their significance for the business man." Stockwell, Herbert Grant, 1866-
Introduction to business management. Harper 1929 276p o.p. 1939 658

1 Business 29-15306

"Sane advice and information for future executives. Pointing out that advancement in business requires the ability to manage other men, the author discusses the duties and qualifications of business managers. The title may be somewhat misleading, as the book deals not so much with the principles of business administration as with the vocation of business manager." Bkl.

"In this second revision . . . a substantial portion of the book has been changed. More than 60 per cent of the 1932 edition has undergone some form of rewriting." Preface

Partial contents: Promotion; Forms of organization; Corporate stock; Corporate mortgages; Extinction of bonded indebtedness; Sinking fund and serial bonds; Capitalization; Expansion; Selling securities; Working capital; Surplus and dividend policies; Consolidation; Holding companies; Illegal combinations; Reconstruction of corporations

Hoagland, Henry Elmer, 1886-
Corporation finance. 2d ed McGraw 1938 596p $4 658.1

1 Corporations 2 Corporations—Finance 38-27792

First published 1933. The second edition, enlarged by 133 pages, devotes more attention to recent changes in corporation policies, developments in governmental relations to corporation problems and to the experiences of other countries in dealing with corporations

"In important respects this book differs in method, emphasis and scope from the traditional text in corporation finance. Illustrative material dealing with the financing of particular corporations is omitted entirely, and the legal aspects of the subject are given very minor consideration. Approximately one-fifth of the space is devoted to short-term financing and internal financial control, separate chapters being set aside for budgets and credit policies. The six chapters of Part 7 deal with social control of corporations. . . In general, the book has merit as a text in spite of its attempted encyclopedic character in parts." Amer. econ. rev.

"Dr. Alford restates the philosophies and fundamentals of management as developed by the great leaders of the movement, interpreting them in the light of present-day industrial conditions. The applications of these fundamentals, drawn from a large variety of manufacturing practices, are set forth in subordinate type to show their nature and intent. Introductory chapters on the rise of modern industry, the effects of mechanization and mass production, the expansion of industry, and the rise of industrial management are followed by chapters on operation and control, simplified procedures, purchasing, inventory, storekeeping, production control, inspection, job standards, classification and symbolization, cost accounting, maintenance, rate setting, wage payment plans, employer-employee relations, safety, administration and managerial performance, and research." "In spite of its many authors, this treatise is more than a handbook, a collection of readings, or a symposium. While, as would be expected, there is divergence in style and difference in the treatment from chapter to chapter, it is evident that the chapters have been written to the specification of a carefully planned outline and have been well edited. Thus the book as a whole is given an unusual degree of unity for a work of this kind. . . This contribution of the Taylor Society to the literature of scientific management will undoubtedly become a standard reference book on the subject." Amer. econ. rev.

Problems in industrial purchasing. 2d ed McGraw 1939 649p (Harvard problem bks.) $5.50 658.7

1 Buying 2 U.S.—Industries 39-22324

First published 1933 under title: "Industrial purchasing." In the second edition, sections on manufacturing as an alternative of purchase and on the procurement of equipment has been added. Rearrangement, addition and deletion of cases has also been achieved

"The purchasing agent is the man against whom the whole ingenuity of salesmanship is brought into play to break down his resistance. Very little thought has been given to equipping the buyer with enough knowledge to meet the argument of the seller. Professor Lewis's book admirably serves this much-neglected purpose; not in the sense, however, that it teaches the art of bargaining, but in the sense that it teaches the art of buying. Few even among business men realize that there is such a science, and fewer still apply it. . . It is from this standpoint that Professor Lewis's exhaustive treatise has been written. It will commend itself to every professional, employer and student of business." N.Y. Times

First published 1931. "Our effort in the second edition has been to incorporate as much as possible of the new work without departing from our original idea of an elementary text. Some parts have been rewritten in an attempt to achieve greater clarity or simplicity in the presentation." Preface to the second edition

"The first thing that impresses one when he opens this volume is the number and the excellence of the illustrations. In an introductory textbook illustrations of the type found here are of importance second only to the subject matter. With 314 original line drawings of exceptionally good workmanship scattered through its pages, the book stands almost in a class by itself in this respect. But good illustrations are by no means the only merit." Industrial and engineering chemistry

1 Chemistry, Technical 38-18326

"The present edition is larger than the previous volume [first published 1933] by about 30 pages, but the text has been carefully revised and corrected. . . . The plan is unchanged from that of the first edition. The early chapters deal with professional aspects of chemical industry and chemistry. A second section is devoted to the tools of chemical industry and the unit operations of chemical engineering. Processes and their applications properly form the greater part of the volume. In this section are described the most important industrial chemical processes." Industrial and engineering chemistry

"Addressed to students of chemistry, teachers of chemistry in high schools and colleges, and to business men who need information about chemical industries, their processes and products. Especially well illustrated with line drawings." Pratt quarterly

1 Chemistry, Technical (W) 37-19429

First published 1928. "This comprehensive work . . . has now been revised and enlarged to include interim advances in the various fields of industrial chemistry. It is adapted to the ken of the average high-school student and of the intelligent adult lay reader. There are problems and reading lists at the chapter endings." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"The author has prepared a concise and very readable volume describing the more important chemical industries. It should not only prove of value as a general textbook for colleges and engineering schools, but serve as an outline to the engineer and technical man who wants to familiarize himself with modern developments in industries that are outside of his own specialty. It should also serve the layman who has had very little chemical background, but who wishes to know more about these fascinating subjects, for it is written, in greater part, in plain, non-technical language with frequently an explanation of those technical terms that are used." 1 Chemical engineering 37-22800

Extensively revised edition of a book which first appeared in 1923 and was revised in 1928. "Revision has been the most extensive in the chapters on flow of fluids and flow of heat. In fact one can say that these two chapters have been practically re-written and much new material added. . . In the industrial stoichiometry chapter there have been added new specific heat data for gases, revised Hildebrand and Cox charts and a new section dealing with systems of units and dimensional similitude. . . In 'Fluid Films' there has been considerable revision in the phrasing but little new material added." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

"Admirable both in purpose and result. The presentation is characterized by succinctness and sound common sense. It does not go into details of specific processes but presents concisely the scientific principles underlying chemical engineering in general, and indicates the proper application of these principles in correct practice. It thus furnishes the actual working data for intelligent design of chemical equipment for various purposes." Pittsburgh

661 CHEMICALS

The average small library will not need special treatises on the various chemicals, as treatment of these will be found in the more general books. Three books, not too technical, which will interest readers with some technical knowledge are:

Ernst, F. A. Fixation of atmospheric nitrogen. Van Nostrand 1928 154p illus (Industrial chemical monographs) o.p. 1939

Mantell, C. L. Industrial carbon. Van Nostrand 1928 410p illus (Industrial chemical monographs) $4.50

Badger, Walter Lucius, 1886- and Baker, Edwin Myron, 1893-
Inorganic chemical technology. McGraw 1928 228p illus (Chemical engineering ser.) $2.50 661

1 Chemicals—Manufacture and industry 2 Chemistry, Inorganic 3 Chemistry, Technical 28-28951

Contents: Common salt; Sulfuric acid; Nitric acid; Minor acids; Sodium carbonate; Caustic soda; Chlorine and bleaching powder; Miscellaneous products

"The authors have accomplished well their purpose of writing a textbook for the chemical engineering student. It will be of almost equal value to the industrial chemistry student. The subject matter is developed very satisfactorily and it is well written. Some, no doubt, will feel that the presentation as a whole is a little elementary and that the opportunity for illustration was not given sufficient consideration. The book is, however, a distinct contribution to its field." Industrial and engineering chemistry

" N.Y. public lib. New technical book

"Never before has the story of American chemical industry been written in such a readable and fascinating manner. . . This book will serve an important function in chemical industry. It will be of real assistance to the student and to the non-technical salesman and executive who would learn the business and historical side of chemical industry." "Intended primarily for the trade, but containing information of interest to general readers and students of food products or cookery." Journal of home economics

W. H. Ukers' "All about coffee" (2d ed Tea & coffee trade journal co. 1935 818p illus $15) covers the history of coffee propagation and drinking and contains 35 pages of bibliography. His "Coffee merchandising" is a condensation of the earlier edition

Romance of tea; an outline history of tea and tea-drinking through sixteen hundred years. Knopf 1936 276p illus $3 663

1 Tea 36-36167

"A comprehensive and entertaining history of the 'boon of the Orient' through sixteen centuries, with information on the tea industry and trade and the manners and customs and fine arts connected with tea-drinking." Boston

Wagner, Philip Marshall, 1904-

American wines and how to make them. 2d ed rev with two additional chapters Knopf 1936 367p illus map $2.50 663

1 Grapes 2 Wine and wine making 36-18426

"This book tells of the possibilities of American grown grapes; goes to some extent into the science of wine-making, and gives incidentally and discursively many interesting historical side-lights"

664 Foods

The following books on special foods and food industries are noted here for the benefit of libraries needing them:

Bardorf, C. F. and Ball, J. A. B. Elements of sugar refining. Chemical pub. co. 1925 240p illus $4

Redgrove, H. S. Spices and condiments. Pitman 1933 361p illus $5

Tressler, D. K., Joslyn, M. A. and Marsh, G. L. Fruit and vegetable juices. Avi pub. co. 1939 549p illus $6

Prescott, Samuel Cate, 1872- and Proctor, Bernard Emerson, 1901-
Food technology. McGraw 1937 630p illus $5 664

1 Food preservation 2 Food supply
37-11103

"Manual on food technology designed to aid in training the scientific personnel required in the modern food industry. It is concerned with the preparation and preservation of food products, of all varieties. Contains illustrations, references, and an index." Book rev. digest

"Comprehensive, authoritative, and readable. . . The book should be of distinct value to sanitarians and other scientists who are concerned in any way with the production and control of quality foods." American journal of public health

Vulté, Hermann Theodore, and Vanderbilt, Sadie Bird
Food industries; text-book on production and manufacture of staple foods, for use in high schools and colleges. 5th ed Chemical pub. co. 1928 367p illus maps $3.50 664

1 Food 28-6937

Revised edition considerably enlarged thruout. References have been moved to ends of chapters. High school and college textbook, describing production and manufacture of staple foods, with illustrations

664.9 Packing industry

Clemen, Rudolf Alexander
By-products in the packing industry. Univ. of Chicago press 1927 410p illus map $4 664.9

1 Meat industry and trade 2 Packing house products 28-1442

"A well-illustrated, readable volume which includes good reference material for students of foods and food production." Journal of home economics

"While the by-products of the meat packing industry yield but a small percentage of the total returns, the industry is itself so huge that the income even from the by-products mounts to a considerable item. The achievement of science in transforming waste into profit is described here by Dr. Clemen. Numerous illustrations and an index." Book rev. digest

665 Oils. Gases

In addition to the titles in this class, the following are also recommended:

Caven, R. M. Gas and gases. Holt 1927 256p illus (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) $1.25, student's ed $1

Lewkowitsch, J. I. Chemical technology and analysis of oils, fats and waxes. 6th ed rev and enl by G. H. Warburton Macmillan 1921-23 3v illus v 1, v3 ea $12, v2 $14 A standard book for all technical reference libraries

Jamieson, George Samuel, 1879-
Vegetable fats and oils. . . Reinhold 1932 444p illus (American chemical soc. Monograph ser.) $6.50 665

1 Oils and fats 32-6567

"The chemistry, production and utilization of vegetable fats and oils for edible, medicinal and technical purposes." Subtitle

"The volume should be useful to all scientific and technical men interested in fats and oils, and particularly to chemists who have to work with or examine them. It has outstanding merit in its compactness, its thoroughness, its convenient arrangement, the botanical identification of each oil, and the carefully selected and conveniently arranged citations. These features should make it a particularly valuable book of reference for frequent consultation." Industrial and engineering chemistry

665.1 Candles

Roy, Louis Maurice Auguste, 1883-
Candle book. Daye 1938 45p illus $2 665.1

1 Candles 38-37453

"This book, the first of a series on old New England crafts, has to do with moulded and dipped candles. Each of the thirty-five excellent half-page halftones is accompanied by a brief descriptive text." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

665.4 Asphalt

Abraham, Herbert, 1883-
Asphalts and allied substances; their occurrence, modes of production, uses in the arts and methods of testing. 4th ed Van Nostrand 1938 xxiv,1491p illus $12.50 665.4

1 Asphalt 2 Asphalt—Bibliography
38-5109

"Complete revision of the well-known comprehensive work, last published in 1929, shows an expansion of 600 pages. An extensive up-to-date classified bibliography covers general treatises, patents, and periodical articles. Includes an interesting historical introduction of 50 pages; also a detailed index." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

665.5 Petroleum

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

American petroleum institute. Petroleum facts and figures. 6th ed The institute 1939 190p illus $1 Contains conveniently arranged, statistical material relating to the petroleum industry

Giddens, P. H. Birth of the oil industry; introduction by I. M. Tarbell. Macmillan 1938 xxxix,216p illus $3 Stresses the industry rather than processes

Gurvich, L. G. and Moore, Harold. Scientific principles of petroleum technology. new ed Van Nostrand 1932 571p illus $9

Ball, Max Waite, 1885-
This fascinating oil business; illus. by Jack Housez; maps by S. W. Reims and C. G. Mundy. Bobbs 1940 444p illus maps $2.50 665.5

1 Petroleum 2 Petroleum industry and trade (W) 40-27422

Partial contents: What is oil; Meet the oil men; Picking the place to drill; Acquiring the right to drill; Drilling the well; Producing the oil; Transporting the oil; Refining the oil; Disposing of the products; New worlds to conquer; Oil and the war

Bell, Harold Sill, 1889-
American petroleum refining. 2d ed Van Nostrand 1930 631p illus $6 665.5
1 Petroleum 30-5874
"Now revised and amplified by the addition of nine chapters. All of the tables and diagrams have been checked and revised so as to include the latest available statistics, while numerous new tables and illustrations have been added." N.Y. public lib. New technical books
"Covers refinery plant and practice in considerable detail, and includes storage and transportation of oil and manufacture of containers. Much of the information should be of value to chemical engineers not definitely interested in oil refining." Pittsburgh

Cloud, Wilbur Frank
Petroleum production. Univ. of Okla. press 1937 600p illus $5 665.5
1 Petroleum 37-10429
"Presents a general treatment of development and production without attempting to cover all the variations in procedure peculiar to individual oil-fields." Pittsburgh

Cross, Roy, 1884-
Handbook of petroleum, asphalt and natural gas; physical and chemical properties, specifications, methods of analysis, economics and statistics, refining processes, patents, tables and bibliography. (1931 revision) Kansas City testing lab. 1931 864p illus (Kansas City testing laboratory. Bulletin 25) o.p. 1939 665.5
1 Asphalt 2 Gas, Natural 3 Petroleum 32-10165
"New edition of a standard reference book. 'Designed for the practical oil man and the student of petroleum, as a quick reference manual.' Has chapters on economics of petroleum; transportation, storage and gauging; properties of crude petroleum; refining and cracking of petroleum; properties of refined petroleum; fuel oil; oil shale; asphalt; natural gas; methods of analysis; tables; patents and publications." Donald Hendry
Bibliography: p790-99

Crowther, James Gerald
‡ About petroleum. Oxford 1938 181p illus $2.25 665.5
1 Petroleum (W) 38-34528
"A comprehensive 'popular' account of the origin, resources, chemistry, prospecting, production, and refining of petroleum, with brief chapters on lubrication, knock, helium, carbon and the production of gasoline from natural gas." N.Y. Public lib. New technical books

Gruse, William Arthur, 1892-
Petroleum and its products; a chemical discussion of the properties, refining and utilization of petroleum. McGraw 1928 377p $4.50 665.5
1 Petroleum 28-16196
"A chemical discussion of the properties, refining and utilization of petroleum." Subtitle
"On the whole, the book is readable and contains a large collection of scientific material related to petroleum which has been carefully coördinated. It is recommended to trained chemists interested in petroleum." Industrial and engineering chemistry

Hager, Dorsey, 1887-
* Fundamentals of the petroleum industry. McGraw 1939 445p illus $3.50 665.5
1 Petroleum industry and trade 39-4667
"Deals concisely with the geology, resources, engineering, history, and economics of the oil industry. Prepared as a college text, but useful to anyone interested." Cleveland

Lidgett, Albert
Petroleum. 3d ed rev and enl Pitman 1928 160p illus (Pitman's common commodities and industries) $2 665.5
1 Petroleum [28-31200]
"I have striven to deal with the chief phases of the petroleum industry in a manner which, I have reason to believe, will be acceptable to the general reader. . . The volume presented herewith is written in language free from irritating technicalities, and I trust it will be particularly interesting to those readers—the world over—who would know something of the effects which the products of petroleum have upon our daily domestic and commercial life, and recognize their usefulness." Preface

Uren, Lester Charles, 1888-
Petroleum production engineering. 2d ed McGraw 1934-39 2v illus v 1 $5, v2 $6 665.5
1 Petroleum 2 Petroleum industry and trade 34-21314
First published 1924 under title: Textbook of petroleum production engineering. Considerably expanded, revised and rewritten to cover new phases of the industry
Contents: v 1 Oil field development; v2 Oil field exploitation
"All phases of oil field technology from the drilling of the producing wells until the oil is in the pipelines on the way to the refinery are covered in detail in this book." Chemical and metallurgical engineering
Selected bibliography at end of each chapter

666 CERAMIC INDUSTRIES

Most small libraries will prefer books which treat of a special branch of the ceramic industry. For those who have a demand for the more comprehensive guide, the following books are recommended:

Ceramic data book featuring equipment and materials, catalogs, also buyer's directory, including a review of developments in the industry as recorded in the literature; handbook section; practical tests, and methods of making ceramic calculations. Industrial publications $5 First published 1922 under title: Ceramic products cyclopedia

Searle, A. B. Encyclopaedia of the ceramic industries; a guide to the materials, methods of manufacture, means of recognition, and testing the various articles produced in the clayworking and allied industries. . . Benn 1929-30 3v ea 63s

666.1 Glass

G. W. Morey's "Properties of glass" (Reinhold 1938 561p illus $12.50) is a comprehensive work with emphasis placed on physical properties of glass as functions of composition

Hodkin, Frederick William, and Cousen, Arnold
Textbook of glass technology. Van Nostrand 1925 xxii,551p illus $15 666.1
1 Glass [25-13221]

"Represents, we believe, the first systematic attempt in the English language. . . . The authors believe that it will be of use to all ranks of those engaged in the production of glassware, to masters who desire factories run on up-to-date principles and to workmen who wish to know something of the theory involved in the processes in which they are day by day engaged." Preface

"All interested in glass will welcome the compilation of these two authors, and the industry owes them a debt of gratitude for such a masterly exposition of their subject, which covers the whole field of glass manufacture." Nature

Bibliography: pref. p11-14

Marson, Percival
Glass and glass manufacture. rev and enl by L. M. Angus-Butterworth Pitman 1936 151p illus (Pitman's common commodities and industries) $1.25 666.1
1 Glass manufacture 37-22053

Partial contents: History; The chemical and physical properties of glass; Coloured glass and artificial gems; Decolorizers; Glass-melting pots and their manufacture; The manipulation of glass; Crown, sheet, and plate glass; Tube, cane, and chemical glassware; Optical glass; Decorative glassware

Rogers, Frances, and Beard, Alice
* 5000 years of glass. . . Stokes 1937 303p illus $2.50 666.1
1 Glass manufacture 2 Glassware (W) 37-23351

Comprehensive account of the history, manufacture and uses of glass. Includes chapters on looking-glasses, the lens, pictorial windows and hints of the future developments of the industry

Waugh, Sidney
Art of glass making; photographs by R. Y. Richie. Dodd 1937 [64]p illus $1 666.1
1 Glass manufacture (W) 38-27155

A book of photographs with brief text which "is designed to answer the questions most commonly asked about glass. It makes no pretense to being more than a primer of the subject. But it is hoped that it will be of interest to those who love fine glass, and who wish to know something of the methods of its production." Preface

666.2 Enamel

In addition to the titles in this class, the following are also recommended:

Hansen, J. E. ed. Manual of porcelain enameling. . . Enamelist pub. co. 1937 513p illus $5

Maryon, Herbert. Metalwork and enameling; a practical treatise on gold and silversmiths' work and their allied crafts. Scribner 1912 327p illus o.p. 1939

Mernagh, L. R. Enamels; their manufacture and application to iron and steel ware. Lippincott 1928 234p illus $7

Day, Lewis Foreman, 1845-1910
Enameling; a comparative account of the development and practice of the art. Batsford 1907 xxv,222p illus 5s 666.2
1 Enamel and enameling W8-71

"The purpose of this book is to provide a background for the beginner in this work, by pointing out the best that has been done in this line; when, where and how it was done; and why it was done that way. A brief history is given, and the technical and artistic sides of the matter are considered. There are also chapters on color and chemistry. The illustrations are numerous and clear-cut." Providence

Millenet, Louis Élie
Enamelling on metal. . . tr. from the French by H. de Koningh. Van Nostrand 1926 112p o.p. 1939 666.2
1 Enamel and enameling [26-11562]

"A practical manual on enamelling and painting on enamel as applied particularly to gold and silver ware and art metal work, with five plates of illustrations." Subtitle

"A manual, very exact and detailed, of the manner in which metal-enamelling is done in Geneva, which has a high reputation, well deserved, in that field. The author is a master in the craft and comes of a line of craftsmen." Providence

666.3 Pottery

Bourry, Émile
Treatise on ceramic industries; a complete manual for pottery, tile, and brick manufacturers. . . 4th rev ed Van Nostrand 1926 482p illus $6 666.3
1 Pottery [12-35188]

Translation of a standard work by a practical potter covering every phase of ceramic ware from bricks to pottery according to French practice. In this edition a few illustrations of English machinery replace the French ones, some obsolete theories have been omitted and special notes added when needed

"Comprehensive treatment of the whole subject according to European practice." Crane and Patterson's Guide to the literature of chemistry

Noke, Charles J. and Plant, Harold J.
Pottery: being a simple account of the history of pottery and a description of some of the processes employed in its manufacture. Pitman 1924 136p illus (Pitman's common commodities and industries) $1.25 666.3
1 Pottery 25-11848

"Being a simple account of the history of pottery and a description of some of the processes employed in its manufacture." Subtitle

"An excellent introduction to the subject, for the collector, the student, the salesman, and the young potter." Brooklyn

666.4 Clay

Searle, Alfred Broadhead, 1877-
Clay and what we get from it. Macmillan 1925 178p illus $1.40 666.4
1 Clay 2 Clay industries 26-8348
"Designed to instruct and interest the public in the wonderful field of usefulness, occupied by the common material, in which we are so greatly concerned. It is a curious mixture of the technical, utilitarian and aesthetic qualities or properties of clay and its products; some beyond the depth of the ordinary reader, some highly interesting, and some ultra sentimental." British clayworker

Wilson, Hewitt, 1891-
Ceramics; clay technology. McGraw 1927 296p illus $4 666.4
1 Clay 2 Clay industries 27-19048
"A technical treatise, detailed and special, on the relation of clay technology to ceramic engineering. Contains chapters on clay formation, characteristics of virgin, plastic, and dry clays, the drying of clay wares, effect of heat on clays, melting, fusion, and crystallization of silicates." Bkl.
Contains bibliographical footnotes and references

666.9 Cements. Limes

Eckel, Edwin Clarence, 1875-
Cements, limes and plasters; their materials, manufacture and properties. 3d ed with chapters on alumina cements and high-strength Portlands Wiley 1928 xxxiv,699p illus maps o.p. 1939 666.9
1 Cement 2 Lime 3 Plaster and plastering 28-13081
"This book through its two previous editions has been the standard reference volume for fundamental information concerning manufacture and properties of cements, limes, and plasters, and it is a disappointment to find that the text of the third edition does not include revisions to bring it up to date. A new section has been added which briefly, (45 pages), but yet most comprehensively discusses the alumina and high-strength portlands, and this may be considered as equivalent to a revision of the old text cements." Industrial and engineering chemistry

Meade, Richard Kidder, 1874-
Portland cement; its composition, raw materials, manufacture, testing and analysis. 3d ed Chemical pub. co. 1926 707p illus $10 666.9
1 Cement 26-12644
"Originally a manual of chemical analysis and physical testing, the third edition retains these features but devotes a large proportion of its space to practical methods of manufacture. Author is a chemist with extensive experience in all branches of the Portland cement industry and in consulting practice." Pittsburgh

667 CLEANING, DYEING, ETC.

National cleaner and dyer's "New technical notes for cleaners and dyers; a practical working guide including the best of former volumes of technical notes and newer methods and processes, covering dry cleaning, dyeing, spotting, prespotting, wet cleaning, and bleaching" (rev and arranged by M. H. Goldman Nat. cleaner and dyer 1930 352p o.p. 1939) is a practical guide in the form of questions and answers for the beginner and experienced dry cleaner and dyer

Brannt, William Theodore, 1844- and Gray, John Bernard, 1885-
* (eds.) Practical dry cleaner, scourer and garment dyer, comprising dry, chemical or French cleaning; purification of benzine; removal of stains or spotting; wet cleaning, including the cleaning of Palm Beach suits and other summer fabrics. 6th corrected ed Baird 1924 378p illus $3 667
1 Cleaning 2 Dyes and dyeing 24-8316
"A compact manual of up-to-date methods of dry and wet cleaning, dyeing, and bleaching. A brief section on practical chemistry lists and describes the reagents used in the trade." Detroit

Hubbard, Clarence Custer, 1879- Donaldson, Edwin R. and Faling, Mable F.
(eds.) Drycleaning and redyeing handbook; including laboratory practice, formulas, tests and tables. . . Hubbard publications 1929 252p illus $5 667
1 Cleaning 2 Dyes and dyeing 29-20783
"Concise, conveniently arranged, authoritative information for the beginner as well as for the workman. Includes practices of dry and wet cleaning, with sections on stain removal, bleaching and stripping, application of dyestuffs, various finishes, testing of fabrics and fibers, with tables and definitions." N.Y. public lib. New technical books
Bibliography: p237-40

667.2 Dyes and dyeing

Exmouth, Charles Ernest Pellew, 7th viscount, 1863-
Dyes and dyeing. (completely rev and rewritten ed) McBride 1928 362p illus o.p. 1939 667.2
1 Dyes and dyeing 28-5655
"The last previous ed. appeared in 1918. A book on dyeing textiles by hand or on a small scale. Useful to craftsmen, to teachers of art in schools, and for home dyeing. Treats of the dyestuffs and processes employed and includes chapters on dyeing of baskets, straw hats and the materials of which they are made, feathers and the finishing of feathers, leather, silk and artificial silk, tied and dyed work, stencils and stenciling, batik or wax resist." Donald Hendry

Matthews, Joseph Merritt, 1874-
Application of dyestuffs to textiles, paper, leather and other materials. Wiley 1920 768p illus $10 667.2
1 Dyes and dyeing 20-19272
A comprehensive and more extended development of the author's earlier book entitled "Laboratory manual of dyeing and textile chemistry." Bibliography: p733-50
"Covers much ground. . . The method of presentation shows the author to be a teacher of great experience, as well as an experienced practitioner in the fields of applied chemistry. These combined characteristics result in a simplicity of style together with a thoroughness of attention to detail." Dyer and calico printer

Matthews, Joseph M.—Continued

Edmund Knecht, Christopher Rawson, and Richard Lowenthal's "Manual of dyeing" (9th ed Lippincott 1933 2v $20) is a standard British work which is noted for the benefit of larger libraries

Paterson, David

Textile colour mixing; a manual intended for the use of dyers, calico printers and colour chemists. 3d rev ed Van Nostrand 1927 137p illus $5 667.2

1 Dyes and dyeing [28-17634]

In the third edition "the same style has been preserved; but the modern representatives of the old pre-war dyes have been substituted." Preface to third edition

667.5 Inks

Mitchell, Charles Ainsworth, 1867-

Inks; their composition and manufacture, including methods of examination and a full list of British patents. Being the 4th ed of Mitchell and Hepworth's "Inks," thoroughly rev and reset Lippincott 1937 408p illus $6 667.5

1 Ink [38-1947]

First written in collaboration with T. C. Hepworth. The 4th edition has been entirely reset, with new chapter arrangement and paragraph headings. Some rewriting is apparent in the text. There are a few more illustrations than in the 3d edition, and the list of British patents has been brought up to 1935. Only one new reference has been added to the brief bibliography

"Starts with an historical introduction, describing the progress of writing and ink-making in ancient Egypt to the present day." Inland printer

667.6 Paints

In addition to the titles in this class, the following are also recommended:

Gardner, H. A. Physical and chemical examination of paints, varnishes, lacquers and colors. 9th ed Inst. of paint and varnish research 1939 578p illus $12.75 (U.S.) $14 elsewhere

Stewart, J. R. Stewart research laboratory 1940 154p illus $5

Molleson, Gilbert Cox

Paints and painting; a manual on the composition of paints and specifications for their use. McKay 1939 274p illus $2 667.6

1 Paint 2 Painting, Industrial (W) 39-6036

Contents: Properties of paint films; Pigments and vehicles; Oil paints and enamels; Special paints; General methods and specifications for painting and varnishing; Special specifications for painting and varnishing; Terms and definitions

"General, practical information on paints and painting, intended for purchasing agents, maintenance engineers, managers, property owners, and others responsible for the maintenance and preservation of buildings, bridges, equipment, and miscellaneous structures, as well as for laymen interested in buying suitable household paints at reasonable prices." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Sabin, Alvah Horton, 1851-

Industrial and artistic technology of paint and varnish. 3d ed rev Wiley 1927 459p illus $5 667.6

1 Paint 2 Varnish and varnishing 27-11408

"Is very like the earlier edition, preserves the same general form, and aims at giving an account of the principles involved in the manufacture, application, and use of paints and varnishes. It is obvious throughout that the book bears the impress of the author's own personal experiences." Nature

Toch, Maximilian, 1864-

Chemistry and technology of paints. 3d ed rev and enl Van Nostrand 1925 413p illus $5 667.6

1 Paint 26-814

"With the exception of a chapter on lakes and toners and added information concerning China wood oil, this edition is largely a reprint of the 2d edition, 1916." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

One of the best treatises on the subject, useful to students, engineers and paint manufacturers. Published in England under title: Paints, their chemistry and technology

Bibliography: p403-05

667.7 Lacquers. Varnishes

The following books are recommended if the library needs special books on these subjects:

Coffignier, Charles. Colours and varnishes; tr. from the French by A. Harvey. Van Nostrand 1925 258p illus o.p. 1939

Koizumi, Gunji. Lacquer work; a practical exposition of the art of lacquering together with valuable notes for the collector. . . Pitman 1923 45p illus (Artistic crafts ser) o.p. 1939

Wilson, S. P. Pyroxylin enamels and lacquers; their raw materials, manufacture and application. 2d ed enl Van Nostrand 1927 253p illus $3.50

668 Other organic chemical industries

Edwin Sutermeister, and F. L. Browne's "Casein and its industrial applications" (2d ed Reinhold 1939 433p illus $6.50) in the Monograph series of the American chemical society is an excellent work covering the utilization of casein in the plastic, paint and textile industries

668.1 Soap

In addition to the titles in this class, the following is also recommended:

Thomssen, E. G. and Kemp, C. R. Modern soap making: a handbook and guide describing soap raw materials, soap making processes, glycerine recovery, and methods of analysis used in controlling manufacture and in testing finished soaps. MacNair-Dorland co. inc. 1937 541p illus $7.50

Rahm, Louis Frank and Meerbott, P. B.
American soap maker's guide. . . 3d ed Baird 1928 709p illus $7.50 668.1
1 Candles 2 Soap 3 Toilet preparations 28-30189

"The 3d edition of Brannt's 'Practical treatise on the manufacture of soap and candles.' "

"An up to date treatise on the art and science of the manufacture of soaps, candles and allied toilet preparations. The most complete and exhaustive book in the English language. Partly based on Brannt's 'Soapmaker's hand book.' " Subtitle

* Plastics; problems and processes. Int. textbook 1938 187p illus (Arts and industries ser.) $2.50 668.4
1 Handicraft 2 Plastic materials (W) 38-28890

"The book is based on actual classroom experience and is intended for teachers, students, home craftsmen, or laymen wanting to know more about modern materials. An elementary knowledge of woodworking and metal working operations is assumed. Includes 64 plates, with designs for projects and photographs of the finished article." Ekl.

Rahm, Louis Frank
Plastic molding; an introduction to the materials, equipment and methods used in the fabrication of plastic products. McGraw 1933 246p illus $3 668.4
1 Plastic materials 33-34130

"A general view of the methods and equipment used in the molding of plastics is presented. The physical characteristics of the important plastics are set forth. The design of molds is discussed in detail and attention is paid to molding presses and other equipment and the erection of molding plants." Mechanical engineering

Simonds, Herbert Rumsey, 1887-
* Industrial plastics. Pitman 1939 371p illus $4.50 668.4
1 Plastic materials 39-19318

"General information for manufacturers, technical men and others in a position to use or introduce plastic materials or articles." Cleveland

668.5 Cosmetics

In addition to the titles in this class, the following are also recommended:

Bennett, Harry. Cosmetic formulary; how to make cosmetics, perfumes, soaps, and allied products. Chemical pub. co. 1937 279p $3.75

Parry, E. J. Cyclopaedia of perfumery. Blakiston 1925 2v $10

"The formulation and production of cosmetics, together with a discussion of modern production and packaging methods and equipment. The first practical book on cosmetic manufacture containing, in addition to the formulas of up-to-date cosmetics, detailed instructions on manufacturing procedure." Subtitle

"In this second edition . . . we have broadened the scope of the information included herein; we have increased the emphasis on production methods and equipment. . . . Hundreds of additional formulas have been added, many of which undoubtedly are better than those in the original work. But only the formulas which have been tested are listed first in each chapter." 1 Cosmetics 2 Perfumery 3 Soap [36-31779]

"In the present edition I have added a further seventeen volatile oils, sixty-eight synthetic aromatic chemicals and thirty-two cosmetic constituents, all of which are worthy of notice, study and experiment, by chemists and perfumers. Improved processes of manufacture have yielded synthetics of cleaner odour, and I have therefore reconsidered, and where necessary amended, previous descriptions of their characters and applications. I have also revised numerous formulae in the light of these observations." Author's preface to the fourth edition [of volume 1]

Contents: v 1 Being a dictionary of raw materials together with an account of the nomenclature of synthetics; 4th ed v2 Being a treatise on the production, manufacture and application of perfumes of all types; 5th ed v3 Being a treatise on modern cosmetics; 5th ed

"The book will no doubt be most useful to the practical perfumer, for whose benefit it has been compiled. It will also afford much pleasant entertainment to any ordinary human being of a philosophical disposition who may meet with it in his leisure time." Nature

1 Distillation [26-1710]

"The first part of this standard work deals with the theory of distillation in its relation to apparatus, with a chapter on actual construction, as well as the chief equations required in calculation. Part 2 gives detailed examples of the distillation of eleven pairs of substances. Part 3 contains 68 detailed tables, while Part 4 has several useful charts." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

First published 1929. In the second edition "the point of view and general characteristics of the first edition have been kept, but changes in text and illustrations have been made wherever necessary to represent modern practice. Because of recent increased interest in zirconium and beryllium, brief chapters on these metals have been added. The chapter on nonferrous alloys has been slightly enlarged and the equilibrium diagrams brought up to date." Preface to second edition

"An elementary text outlining the metallurgy of most of the metals. The author's purpose was, first, to provide engineers with a quick reference book giving modern practice in extracting and refining and also information regarding sources, uses, and important alloys of the metals; and second, to assist students who are beginning their metallurgical studies and are lacking practical experience. Supplementary reading suggestions following each chapter are selective rather than exhaustive." Industrial arts index

"This beginner's book is briefly and chiefly concerned with physical metallurgy; that is, the physical and chemical behavior of metals during shaping and treating operations, as distinguished from chemical metallurgy, which has to do with melting and refining. The bulk of the work is devoted to iron and steel and includes a general chapter on testing. There are eighty-two illustrations, many of which are microphotographs; also a bibliography of thirty-five titles." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"This book should be of general interest. It is not written in technical language but on the contrary goes to the other extreme of being ultra-popular in style, dramatizing too many commonplace happenings and surrounding excellent description with too much narrative. The book contains many data both useful and informing. It also is authentic, for, as the author states, each chapter has been read and approved by well-qualified metallurgists." 669.2 Gold and silver

All of the metals covered by the class numbers, 669.2-669.7 are well dealt with in Liddell's "Handbook of non-ferrous metallurgy." (class 669) This work will suffice for the needs of many small libraries

Two books, unfortunately out of print, 1939, which are recommended if available, are:

Hofman, Heinrich Oscar, 1852-1924
Metallurgy of zinc and cadmium. McGraw 1922 341p illus $4 669.5

1 Cadmium 2 Zinc 22-2031

"It covers zinc and cadmium from every angle from the mine to the finished product, chemical or metal. Its value is enhanced by the fact that it covers so completely the foreign methods of abstracting zinc which are so important and about which it has always been so difficult to obtain accurate information. There are excellent chapters on the industrial uses, alloys and compounds of zinc which bring the book close to the metallurgist's and manufacturer's interest in zinc from the standpoint of its industrial uses and forms." 1 Metal work—Bibliography 2 Metal work—Indexes 39-27964

An attempt to assist pupil and instructor in finding specific plans for job constructions. "Over 90 books and pamphlets, together with six magazines published for the past ten years, have been indexed for 'Metal shop projects.' Since the main purpose of the index has been to list projects, little attempt has been made to classify operations and related information. In a few cases, however, projects outside the range of metal work have been included and processes, more or less novel, appear." Preface

* Principles of electroplating and electroforming (electrotyping) 2d ed McGraw 1930 424p illus $4.50 671

1 Electroplating 2 Electrotyping 30-5924

First published 1924. The second edition has been brought up-to-date and a chapter on chromium plating added
"Presents the principles underlying electrodeposition, to assist those in the industry to understand and apply the results of research work. The practical plater will find many sound suggestions on his everyday problems and on the many details leading up to successful electrodeposition." Pittsburgh

Crane, Edward Villeroy
Plastic working of metals and power-press operations. 2d ed Wiley 1938 450p illus $5 671

1 Dies 2 Metal work 39-2064

First published 1932. "Two new chapters, one on types of metal working presses and one on means of combining operations in tooling automatically fed presses, and also tabular data and tables of properties have been added to the first edition." Bkl.

"An excellent book on properties of metals and modern methods of hot and cold working. Concerned to a considerable extent with steel." Pittsburgh

"Aims to present the hand-tool manipulations, particularly those in cutting, shaping, forming, fastening and finishing the common metals. . . Not a treatise in sheet metal, forging or any other specialized branch of metalwork and is not intended to prepare the student for any particular metal trade." Preface
"Chiefly bench work. A school shop text but also useful to the home craftsman." Cleveland

Wendt, Robert Ernest
Foundry work; a text on molding, dry-sand coremaking, melting and mixing of metals and problems in foundry management. 3d ed McGraw 1936 240p illus $2 671
1 Founding 36-17346
New edition of a standard textbook first published 1923. The third edition "was prepared in order to include recent developments in the manfacture of castings, such as mass-production foundries, standard pattern colors, alloy gray iron and alloy steel castings, also correct designing of castings." Preface
"The first part discusses some fundamental principles in the manufacture of castings; the second presents exercises in bench and flour moulding, and types of machines; the third deals with melting furnaces for gray iron, brass, and aluminum, and the fourth deals with problems of the foundry executive." Bkl.

"Practical handbook giving formulae for solders and methods used in soft soldering, hard soldering, and brazing." Pittsburgh

671W Welding

In the Decimal classification there is no separate number for books on welding, and they may be put with other books in 671. For libraries where it is a convenience to have them separate it is suggested that W be added to the class number

American welding society
* Welding handbook. 1938 ed The society 1938 1211p illus $6 671W

1 Welding 38-24920

Offered to the metal industries in response to demand for practical up to date information in concise form. "Outstanding authorities cover processes, materials, testing and applications of welding. Includes critical digests of the literature." Pratt quarterly

American welding society. Educational committee
Gas welding and cutting; instructions for beginners in gas welding and cutting. The society 1929 78p illus pa 25c 671W

1 Metal-cutting 2 Welding 30-20615

Contains character of gases, materials and apparatus for welding and cutting, general directions for use and problems in welding cast iron, wrought iron, steel and non-ferrous metals

Giachino, Joseph William, 1906-
Oxy-acetylene welding for beginners; lessons and projects. Manual arts 1939 96p illus $1.48 671W

1 Welding (W) 39-21592

"This beginner's book comprises 23 graded lessons, with brief explanations of apparatus, safeguards, use of tools, and procedures, and the identification of metals. In addition there are well-diagramed instructions for the making of 17 useful articles." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Hendricks, Meredith Sherwood, 1902-
Oxy-acetylene welder's handbook; a complete and practical manual of modern practice [2d ed] Welding engineer 1939 224p illus $1.50 671W

1 Welding 40-4236

Contents: Welding gases; Welding equipment; Setting up equipment; Methods of welding; Preparation for welding; Inspecting the weld; Training operators; Welding properties of common metals; Testing; Important applications; Oxy-acetylene welding

"Few engineers will ever handle a welding torch themselves, but yet will find this handbook of value. While it is written in a simple and non-technical manner for use by the practical welder, very little of the information in its 200 pages is of a type to be out of place in the library of the engineer who designs for or specifies welding." Chemical and metallurgical engineering

Kehl, Robert Joseph, 1889-
Oxyacetylene welding. rev by H. M. Potter Am. tech. soc. 1939 130p illus $1.25 671W

1 Welding (W) 38-37560

"Resetting, extensive revision, and enlargement of this little work, last published in 1931, provides the welding operator, as well as the superintendent and manager, with an authoritative manual on the technique of the oxyacetylene welding of steel, iron, bronze, silver, white metal, aluminum, and copper. It includes sections on pipe welding, hard surfacing, cutting and lead burning, automotive repair work, the design of welding jigs, and costs." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Lincoln electric company, Cleveland
Procedure handbook of arc welding, design and practice. 6th ed The company 1940 1117p illus $1.50 671W

1 Electric welding 40-12860

First published 1933 and frequently revised. The 6th edition has been expanded by 100 pages over the 5th edition to bring the data up to date. The physical format has been changed by condensing the type matter and illustrations; the paper used is finer, resulting in reduction of size of the volume

Mackenzie, Louis Burton, 1880- and Card, Harold Sumner, 1890-

1 Welding 38-21290

A practical reference book which is subject to frequent revision

"Valuable compilation of matter on the processes, materials, apparatus and methods employed in gas torch, electric, and thermit welding, together with much related matter. Contains a trade catalogue section." Donald Hendry

Potter, Morgan H.
Electric welding. . . Am. tech. soc. 1938 126p illus $1.25 671W

1 Electric welding (W) 38-11044

"A practical text covering the fundamental principles and applications of the various types of electric arc welding, including the use of power tube rectifiers." Subtitle

"This plainly written and copiously illustrated little work . . . provides the new or inexperienced welder with the information necessary to start him on the road to success. A chapter by William A. Dick concerning the use of power-tube rectifiers has been added." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Welding engineer's pocketbook. Chemical pub. co. 1939 240p illus $1.50 671W

1 Welding

"This is a revised edition of a small work published a few years ago in England, brought up to date with accounts of new processes and methods. Concise and comprehensive, it gives detailed information on electric arc, resistance, and oxy-acetylene welding, the welding of various metals and alloys, oxygen cutting, thermit welding, protective devices, weld testing (including X-ray methods), lead-burning, and brazing, with tabular data and clear illustrations." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

672 IRON WORK

Bollinger, Joseph Walter, 1897-
Elementary wrought iron. Bruce pub. 1930 139p illus $1.32 672

1 Ironwork 30-7396

"Describes the materials and tools used, and gives detailed descriptions of twenty-four basic operations to be employed in the projects suggested. The projects range from simple processes to the more difficult and include magazine baskets, end tables, fern stands, andirons, candlesticks, lamps and other articles. Illustrated." Ontario library review

Holbrook, Stewart H.
Iron brew; a century of American ore and steel. Macmillan 1939 352p $2.50 672

1 Iron industry and trade 2 Steel industry and trade (W) 39-27657

"A popular history of steel in the United States. . . The discovery of ore, the conversion of iron into steel, the difficulties with patents, the growth of large cities around the industry, important strikes, and the present struggle between labor factions are dramatically described, with pictures of such outstanding personalities in the industry, as Gary, Schwab, Carnegie, and Captain Bill Jones." 1 Timber 2 Wood 34-27239

"The chief emphasis has been placed on wood anatomy since the majority of the characters used in wood identification are derived from this source. The first part of the book deals with wood structure, and the procedure has been from the gross to the minute. Anatomical characters visible with the naked eye and hand lens are discussed first, along with such non-mechanical physical properties as color and weight. This portion of the text is followed by information on minute anatomy, couched in language as simple as the subject matter will permit." Preface

Brown, Nelson Courtlandt, 1885-
Logging—principles and practices in the United States and Canada. Wiley 1934 284p illus $3.50 674

1 Lumbering 34-38376

A "text intended primarily for students of forest schools who have had little if any opportunity to study logging problems in more than one region. This text is supplementary to a companion book on log transportation [in preparation, 1935]" Preface

Bibliography: p263-82

N. C. Brown's "Logging—transportation; the principles and methods of log transportation in the United States and Canada" (Wiley 1936 327p illus $4) is a supplement to this book. Surveys various methods of log transportation and their costs

Bryant, Ralph Clement, 1877-
Lumber; its manufacture and distribution. 2d ed Wiley 1938 xxiv,535p illus $5 674

1 Lumber 38-28938

First published 1922. In the second edition "Additions include the improvement in equipment and manufacture and changes in the field of lumber distribution, as well as new material on such subjects as labor unions in the lumber industry, and compensation acts." Bkl.

"Textbook for use in schools of forestry, but valuable to anyone interested in the subject. . . Begins with mill location and equipment and follows the details of lumber manufacture and markets, trade associations, grades and inspection of lumber, tariffs, etc. Many useful tables and other data are appended." Donald Hendry

Holtman, Dudley Frank, 1889-

1 Building, Wooden 2 Wood [29-13877]

"The first seven chapters include information on the factors affecting the use of wood in construction; lumber grading, grade provisions, and working stresses; the principal woods used in building and construction; the identification of common woods; preservation treatment; the use of paints and stains and methods of preventing termite damage. The last four chapters contain information on approved methods of using lumber in light building construction and millwork, and in both heavy timber and temporary construction." Preface

"He has not produced a work on the theoretical side, but one that is wholly practical in character. . . As a work of reference for the guidance of the designer as well as the actual constructor, it will be found invaluable." Engineering news-record

Atwater, Mrs Mary (Meigs) 1878-

Shuttle-craft book of American hand-weaving; being an account of the rise, development, eclipse, and modern revival of a national popular art, together with information of interest and value to collectors, technical notes for the use of weavers, and a large collection of historic patterns. Macmillan 1928 275p illus $3.50 677

1 Textile design 2 Textile industry and fabrics 3 Weaving 28-23648

"An important addition to the books on hand weaving. The history of American hand weaving is succinctly reviewed in two chapters, giving the names and history of some of the early American weavers. Various other phases of weaving are described, such as the literature on weaving, collections of weaving and the language of weaving. The second and main part of the book is devoted to weaving and to the drafts of patterns, there being 297 drafts given. The directions for setting up, dressing the loom and weaving are clear and concise." Wis. bul.

Textile fibers, yarn, and fabrics. Appleton-Century 1929 236p illus (Century vocational ser) $2.50 677

1 Fibers 2 Textile industry and fabrics 3 Yarn 29-17910

"An excellent book for a general view of the subject. Simply and clearly written, and yet sufficiently technical to be useful as a reference work. Does not duplicate other books." Wis. bul.

"Gives so much of the story of textiles as will make of the reader a competent purchaser and user of fabrics. The book, covering the whole textile field, presents a course of study practicable for textile classes in high schools or colleges or for study classes in women's clubs. This volume then has every home-maker in mind as a possible reader. The maker and dealer in textiles and fabrics should also find the book helpful. A bibliography follows each of the four divisions of the subject." Industrial arts index

1 Fibers 2 Textile industry and fabrics 36-22504

First published 1931. The second edition covers the same scope as the first, but "developments in the field of textiles that have occurred with great rapidity in the past few years have necessitated revision and expansion of the subject matter. This is particularly true of synthetic fibers and of the finishing of fabrics. Recognition has also been given to the changes in the economic conditions in the various phases of textile production and manufacture. Slight reorganization has been made of the subject matter presented, to facilitate successful classroom use of the text." Preface to the second edition

"College textbook, including laboratory exercises designed to enable the student to become familiar with fabrics, manufacturing processes, and simple methods of testing. There are chapters on dyeing, design, synthetic fibers, and choice and care of fabrics." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

1 Silk, Artificial 30-1582
A revision of the 1927 edition in which every process of manufacture and use of this artificial fiber is described in detail
"The author states in the Preface that the objects of his book are to attempt a comprehensive outline of the rayon industry, and to supply the ever increasing demand for 'information and facts so far as they are now known regarding the marvels of this latest textile fiber.' The book is written from the textile rather than the chemical viewpoint. Approximately the first half of the book is devoted to historical background. The second half of the book is devoted to a consideration of the four commercial processes for the manufacture of rayon, methods of testing and processing, and a list of pertinent patents." Burns, Robert Martin, 1890- and Schuh, Arthur Eugene, 1899-

Protective coatings for metals. Reinhold 1939 407p illus (American chemical soc. Monograph ser) $6.50 691

1 Corrosion and anti-corrosives 39-9488

"This book is much more comprehensive in title and scope than the valuable monograph by H. S. Rawdon on 'Protective Metallic Coatings,' [o.p 1939] of which it should be considered as a successor, rather than a revision. . . The major subjects are: mechanism of corrosion, surface preparation, types and methods of application; coatings of zinc; cadmium, tin, nickel, chromium, copper, lead, aluminum, silver, gold, and platinum metals; and methods of testing metallic coatings. In addition, three chapters are devoted to the composition, application, and evaluation of paint coatings on metals. A final chapter includes oxide and phosphate coatings and vitreous enamels." Industrial and engineering chemistry

Burt, Henry Jackson, 1873-

Steel construction; a text and reference book on the design of steel framework for buildings; rev. by C. H. Sandberg. Am. tech. soc. 1939 438p illus $3.50 691

1 Building, Iron and steel 2 Steel, Structural 38-30616

First published 1920. "This edition of Steel Construction has been thoroughly revised and enlarged to bring it up to the present in steel-construction practice. The revision includes up-to-date specifications and data, and numerous photographs and drawings. The material has been rearranged into chapter form to make it more convenient for use. Also, additional chapters have been written, such as those on Welding and Industrial Buildings, to cover present steel building design more completely." Preface

"A very useful handbook containing a great deal of valuable information on the design, not the erection, of steel buildings, except mill buildings. Valuable to structural designers, especially to young engineers. Much of the matter is original with the author. Instructors in engineering schools will find the book useful. Author was structural engineer for a firm of architects, and writes from large experience." Donald Hendry

Dencer, Frederick William, 1876-

Detailing and fabricating structural steel. 2d ed McGraw 1930 441p illus o.p. 1939 691

1 Steel, Structural 30-32189

In this edition "the original material has been extensively revised, old data being brought up to date and new material added. Many new drawings have been supplied, and the book has been entirely reset." Preface to second edition

"Treats in detail of the work performed in structural shops and drawing rooms where steel as it comes from the mills is fabricated into the variously dimensioned members required for structural purposes according to specifications." Donald Hendry

"A thoroughly practical manual for the use of those engaged in actual design." Engineering

Fish, Gilbert Dudley

1 Building materials 39-24158

"The changes in the Fifth Edition consist of the introduction of several new chapters on properties of materials and on the treatment of certain materials of construction not covered in previous editions, together with a revision of subject matter in all chapters and a rearrangement of the chapters." Preface to the fifth edition

"While it makes no pretense to the completeness of the earlier treatises by Johnson and Thurston, it amply satisfies the ordinary wants of both student and practitioner, although frankly directed more to the former than to the latter." Engineering news

Speller, Frank Newman, 1875-
Corrosion causes and prevention; an engineering problem. 2d ed McGraw 1935 694p illus $4 691

1 Corrosion and anti-corrosives 35-7874

"This revised edition brings the 1926 edition up to date, adding certain new information and discarding such of the old data as have been superseded. It is divided into two parts, the first giving a description of how corrosion proceeds and its causes, and the second discussing practical methods of prevention. . . The appendix contains calculations and chemical determinations applicable to corrosion, gives special recommendations for preventing corrosion in refrigerating plants, and a tabulation of accepted materials for handling various corrosives." Industrial and engineering chemistry

"Comprehensive, authoritative treatment with special reference to ferrous metals and chief attention to practical problems. Based on a very thorough examination of existing literature and on the experience of the author who is Director of the metallurgical department of the National tube company." Pittsburgh

Ames, Van Meter, 1898-

Introduction to beauty. Harper 1931 280p o.p. 1939 701

1 Esthetics 31-21723

"Professor Ames seeks to measure beauty not for the aesthete, but for the ordinary man and woman. He writes about such mundane things as the movies, books, dancing and business, not to overlook love and education. By dividing his book into three parts: aesthetic theory, fine arts and art and life, he has sought to comprehend the meaning of beauty for the practical worker in terms that he and she can easily understand." Boston Transcript

"This book is itself a thing of beauty, a book that sparkles and glows, and it will be a dull reader who does not feel that he has been in contact with the stuff which esthetics makes an object of research." Christian century

"The root of Mr Bell's argument is that a true work of art produces in us aesthetic ecstacy and emotion, and by doing so awakens and stimulates the spiritual side of our nature." Saturday rev.

Bosanquet, Bernard, 1848-1923

History of æsthetic. 2d ed Macmillan 1904 xxiii,502p (Library of philosophy) $5 701

1 Esthetics [31-13898]

A standard work "primarily addressed to those who may find a philosophical interest in understanding the place and value of beauty in the system of human life, as conceived by leading thinkers in different periods of the world's history." Preface

The second edition has not been rewritten, but contains corrections, usually in the form of foot-notes, made necessary by the publication of a treatise on Aristotle by Professor Butcher. This edition has been printed several times. Bibliography: p495-98

Bernard Bosanquet's "Three lectures on aesthetic" (Macmillan 1915 118p $1.50) is valuable as a simple and untechnical presentation of the general nature of the esthetic attitude, nature and the arts, and the contrasted qualities of esthetic experience, that is beauty and ugliness

Art, for amateurs and students. Doubleday 1926 xx,205p illus o.p. 1939 701

1 Art 2 Art—Study and teaching 26-12330

"In this book, which is itself a work of art, the author explains the principles which are the foundation of all art. To illustrate these principles and to furnish material to exercise the reader's powers of discrimination, the author has reduced to fundamental terms examples of all the arts—painting, sculpture, architecture, and the rest—in primitive, medieval, and modern times. These [36] plates are separate from the text and form the second half of the book." Book rev. digest

"Professor Mather's observations, whether on Thomas Aquinas, on Chinese landscape art, on modern prose and James Joyce, are those of a past master of culture in the Goethean sense. His theory of the correspondences of rhythm, is infinitely suggestive and profound. It betrays a creative insight which is uncanny . . . It is the best account of the 'aesthetic transaction' I know." Art spirit . . . comp. by Margery Ryerson . . . illus. by Robert Henri. Lippincott 1939 292p illus $3 704

1 Art—Addresses, essays, lectures 39-4273

First published in 1923. In 1930 an introduction by Forbes Watson and reproductions of 16 of the author's paintings were added. In the 1939 reprint, ten of the reproductions were changed

The book is compiled from miscellaneous writings and class talks and gives the artist's opinions on art and painting and his advice on the technique of making pictures

"Mr Henri is full of individuality, a dynamic soul, and he delights in giving electric shocks. There are plenty of these in his criticisms and in his apothegms. His book is not meant for a long bath but for a quick plunge." Boston Transcript

The first fifteen of the twenty-eight essays in this volume were published in 1906 under the same title

"In this book I have tried to deal with the other arts, as I know or recognize them; and I find seven: painting, sculpture, architecture, music, handicraft, the stage (in which I include drama, acting, pantomime, scenery, costume and lighting) and separate from these, dancing. Each of these arts I have tried to study from its own point of view, and (except in the case of architecture, which has almost ceased to exist as an art) in its contemporary aspects, and in those contemporary aspects which seem to me most important or most characteristic." Material on general museum administration will be found in class 069

The Metropolitan museum of art in New York city publishes well illustrated pamphlets and books of interest to the collector and valuable to the library. For a complete list, their pamphlet "Publications on sale" will be sent to any library free of charge. A few of those most useful in the smaller library have been entered in their proper classes. The Museum's handbooks and catalogs to the various wings and collections in the Museum are desirable in special art libraries. The Museum of modern art also publishes many valuable catalogs of exhibitions with biographical and critical notes

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following are recommended:

New York. Museum of modern art. Modern works of art; ed. by A. H. Barr. The museum 1934 38p illus $2.50 Contains photographs of outstanding examples of modern paintings, sculpture, constructions, architecture and furniture with a brief biography of each artist

1 Art—Galleries and museums 2 Paintings [24-31900]

A reprint of a book first published 1924 by Doran

"Something of the author's own unbounded enthusiasm over pictures is conveyed in this survey of the great galleries of Europe. The book is selective in that the emphasis is rather 'on the few pictures that must not be missed than on the many that must be seen.' Noteworthy for the surprising amount of information compressed into an illuminating phrase. Seventy-two photographic reproductions and index." N.Y. state lib.

Contents: London, the National gallery, the Tate, the Wallace, and other collections; Paris, the Louvre, the Luxembourg and other galleries; Madrid, the Prado; Milan, the Brera and other collections; Florence, the Uffizi, the Pitti and others; Rome, Vatican frescoes; Venice; Vienna; Munich; Dresden; Berlin; Amsterdam; The Hague; Antwerp; Brussels

"Within the walls of the Museum are to be found archaeological studies of Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Greece, and Rome. This collection has been greatly increased within the last twenty years by the many original pieces of sculpture. The many painters and schools of painting from the olden days to modern times are described in the handbook briefly and appreciatively. There are also chapters devoted to metal work, jewelry, woodwork, ceramics, textiles and laces, sculpture, and to new acquisitions. The book is copiously illustrated and has a good index." N.Y. First published 1934. In the revised edition, the last three chapters have been amplified and the conclusion has been rewritten. There are four new plates which have been gathered with the old ones at the end of the text

"Believing the new movement to be 'one of the most dramatic chapters in the annals of art,' the author has considered first the background and then the leading personalities (Van Gogh, Gauguin, Matisse, Picasso and others), in relationship to their environment and to the schools they wrecked or founded. Almost half the book is devoted to American artists, including the Mexican. Controversial in spirit but not without penetrating criticism. Intimate details of Bohemian life seem unnecessarily emphasized. Full-page black and white reproductions of representative paintings. Index." N.Y. libraries

1 Art—History 40-203

"Concerned with the patterns and behavior of peoples which go into the making of their art, and with the results on population which follow. His book should be of interest to readers who want more than a 'history' of art. Mr. Richardson draws upon the painting, sculpture, and architecture of England, Germany, France, Italy, and the United States from 1776 to 1914 for the exemplification of his theory." 1 Art—History [32-26702]
"A much-needed translation from the German authority's standard work, first published in 1915. Qualities emphasized in each art form are: linear and 'painterly,' plane and recession, closed and open form, multiplicity and unity, clearness and unclearness. If read slowly and tested by observation, it will put the reader in possession of a sound basis for esthetic appreciation." Pittsburgh

709.2 Artists—Dictionaries

This number is used here for biographical dictionaries of artists as it is a number recommended in the Decimal classification for art biography if 927 is not used
In this catalog very few books in foreign languages are entered. However the following dictionaries are very highly recommended if the library can afford them:

Bénézit, Emmanuel, ed. Dictionnaire critique et documentaire des peintres, sculpteurs, dessinateurs et gravures de tous les temps et de tous les pays. Stechert 1911-23 3v illus $20 "A very comprehensive list. . . includes many minor and contemporary names and is especially strong for French names." Mudge

Édouard-Joseph, René. Dictionnaire biographique des artistes contemporains, 1910-1930. Art & édition, Paris 1930-34 3v illus. Price in 1936 was 600 francs

Müller, H. A. and Singer, H. W. Allgemeines künster lexikon: leben und werke der berühmtesten bildenden künstler. Rütten & Loeming Frankfurt am Main, Germany 1922 6v. Price in 1936 was 75 marks

Thieme, Ulrich, and Becker, Felix, eds. Allgemeines lexikon der bildenden künstler von der antike bis zur gegenwart, unter mitwirkung von 300 fachgelehrten des in-und auslandes. Westerman 1907-39 v 1-33 ea $17.50 "A very comprehensive list, including engravers, etchers and architects as well as painters and sculptors." Mudge. A library that has this valuable set might not need the other foreign language dictionaries listed in this class

1 Art, Roman 2 Rome—Antiquities 29-6319

"A history and description of the whole field of art in ancient Rome, written for both the student and the general reader. There are numerous illustrations." Book rev. digest

"Mrs. Strong is at home in every highway and byway of the subject; no discovery escapes the meshes of her far-flung net. Her illustrations—necessarily on a small scale—though they cannot give an adequate representation of the quality of the originals, at any rate serve as an index to nearly all the more important monuments, and fall not far short of 600 in number. The bibliographies which close each chapter are useful and up to date." Times (London) lit. sup.

"The book is a reprint of the chapters on Greek art in the Cambridge Ancient History. Altho the text has been revised there have been no substantial alterations. A number of illustrations have been added bringing the number up to 248. Bibliography." Book rev. digest

"Is of importance to archaeological students, as it brings within reach, for the astonishingly moderate sum of half a guinea, a survey which covers the development side by side of Greek sculpture and painting. Besides being strangely enough the only book of its kind in English, it is also one of the most brilliant productions of present-day scholarship. But an extremely sane and extremely entertaining summary of ten centuries of Greek art in the space of a hundred pages is not of interest to archaeologists alone." Spectator

Symonds, John Addington, 1840-1893
Renaissance in Italy; the fine arts. 3d ed Scribner 1897 394p $3.75 709.45
1 Art, Italian [9-16935]
First published 1877. This is the third volume in the author's "Renaissance in Italy"
"He tells us that he 'does not pretend to retrace the history of the Italian arts, but rather to define their relations to the main movement of renaissance culture.' In this retrospective view he goes as far back as the end of the thirteenth century . . . Mr Symonds has consulted the best written authorities; but he rightly attaches more importance to that personal knowledge of pictorial, plastic, and structural works which forms the premises to the argument . . . His descriptions show quick perceptions, and kindle into eloquence under a diction which sometimes has less of the sobriety of the historian than of the ardour of the rhapsodist." Saturday rev.

"The four competent men who have. . . made this volume possible, have given us preludes to the work itself, valuable beyond comparison. They are Christian Brinton and Carl Laurin for Sweden, Emil Hanover for Denmark, and Jens Thiis for Norway. . . This book is definitive; it leaves almost nothing to be added, down to this year of grace; it contains 375 illustrations and a careful index of artists." N.Y. Times

1 Art, Japanese [35-20290]
"A very serviceable volume, which surveys in much detail the arts of Japan from the prehistoric period to the present. The author divides his material into two parts, the first dealing with development of the arts themselves, the second constituting a guide to Japanese temples and museums. While Tsuda's discussion of Japanese art is comprehensive and thorough, it is presented in an easy and informal manner. The facts are neatly marshaled, but not in pursuance of an elaborate literary plan. Since the author's English is often a little quaint in its construction, an intimate atmosphere results. Each chapter of the first part, concerning itself with a designated period, opens with a general survey and takes up in turn such major classifications as painting, sculpture, industrial arts and architecture. Nor has the important matter of gardens been neglected." N.Y. Times

"Written as the result of an investigation of Mexican art which was sponsored by the University of Mexico and of which the author was in charge, this is the first attempt at a treatment of the subject at once comprehensive and intensive. It shows throughout its length the close interrelation between the native art of Mexico and its history, its customs and, above all, its religion, which is the very breath of its being. The early chapters cover the art of the Aztec civilization and of the Spanish invasion, following which is a description of the art of the Colonial period. The final part is given over to the work of the moderns." Providence

"The authors are professional landscape architects of wide, practical experience. They make clear each point, as it arises, building up a picture which is straightforward, sharply defined and finally drawn into a well rounded composition. Altogether an excellent book which with its intentional limitations, can be unreservedly commended." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Landscape-gardening. Macmillan 1920 338p illus (Rural science ser.) $2.75 710

1 Landscape gardening 20-21341

"After outlining the aims of landscape gardening and pleading for the conservation of natural features and resources, the author discusses, land, planting materials and planting, water, home grounds, farms, and semi-arid regions, thoroughfares, railway properties, parks, golf and school grounds, arboretums and botanic gardens, cemeteries and city planning. An appendix contains two short papers on landscape work by the late Byran Lathrop, of Chicago. Brief allusions are made to the part that the engineer may take in landscape planning. . . Freshness of treatment, sanity, and relative brevity characterize this book." Engineering news-record

Master plan; with a discussion of the theory of community land planning legislation. Russell Sage 1938 151p $2 711

711 B31m 1 City planning (W) 38-27385

"The master plan of a community is a reference map or guide, rather general in character, which is developed and used by planning commissions as a means to denote their ideas in regard to improvements. What it should and should not contain, and how it differs from the official city map, are the principal matters discussed by Mr. Bassett. . . In Part II of the book, dealing with the general features of the master plan, there are several chapters summarizing the concept of a master plan as drafted in various state and city planning acts." 1 City planning 29-27594

"Le Corbusier as an architect stated his theories of building in 'Towards a new architecture.' Here he applies the same principles to the art of town planning, stressing planned rather than haphazard space allotment for immense urban populations. In details Le Corbusier is often an extremist, but his ingenious plans for decongestion, augmentation of density, increase of means for city travel, and increase of parks and open spaces show remarkable vision." Contents: Gardening with trees; Approaching the house; House and its setting; Lawn and terrace treatment; Backgrounds and ground covers; Walks formal and informal; Woodland; Green and other gardens; Planting fundamentals

"An able and authoritative work on the use of woody plants . . . The many fine photographic illustrations should help to make America tree and shrub conscious—for we are far behind England in this type of gardening, perhaps because we still have so much native plant material that we fail to appreciate its landscape possibilities when correctly used in the planting plan of home grounds." 1 Sepulchral monuments 15-22728

"Two hundred subjects chosen from seven centuries." Subtitle

"The purpose of this book is not so much to provide a historical account of the development of those types of memorials which are the most suitable for present use, as to focus attention on good examples, old and new." Preface

"The pages from beginning to end are obviously written 'con amore,' and in no commercial or bookmaking spirit; the author shows himself to be not only a gentleman and a scholar, but also imbued with a true poetic temperament." Athenaeum

720 ARCHITECTURE

Many excellent books essential to the architect but too special for the average public library are not included here. It is assumed that architects have fairly complete libraries of their own for the use of their draughtsmen

The books noted here are valuable for the library with a strong interest in architecture:

Belcher, John. Essentials in architecture; an analysis of the principles and qualities to be looked for in buildings. Scribner 1907 171p illus o.p. 1939

Library of architectural documents. Pencil point press 1923-25 4v o.p. 1939 A valuable series of reprints of old books of architectural plates which makes this material, useful to architects. The following volumes have been published: v 1 Architecture toscane, by A. H. V. Grandjean de Montigny, and A. P. S. M. Famin; v2 One hundred selected plates from Fragments d'architecture antique, by H. d' Espouy; v3 Selected monuments of French Gothic architecture; one hundred plates from Monuments historique, chosen from the Archives de la Commission des monuments historiques; v4 Masterpieces of Spanish architecture, Romanesque and allied styles; one hundred plates from Monumentos arquitectonicos de Espana, with text by J. V. Van Pelt

Sturgis, Russell. How to judge architecture. Baker & Taylor 1903 221p illus o.p. 1939

Vitruvius, P. M. Vitruvius; the ten books on architecture; tr. by M. H. Morgan. Harvard univ. press 1914 331p illus $4 A classic which will interest architects mainly

Wallis, F. E. How to know architecture; the human elements in the evolution of styles. Harper 1910 326p illus o.p. 1939

Brownell, Baker, 1887- and Wright, Frank Lloyd, 1869-

Architecture and modern life. Harper 1937 339p illus $4 720

1 Architecture 2 City planning 3 Housing 37-28459

"The text is a somewhat philosophical discussion on architecture and living, with chapters on such subjects as Architecture and social life, Some aspects of the past and present of architecture, Expression and the modern world, A balanced society; and a closing dialogue between the two authors, based on Mr. Wright's Broadacre City. Decentralization is a basic theme thruout." Wis. bul.

"The book is richer than any outline of its content. Both authors are men of knowledge, imagination, force, and, on occasion, wit. . . One may question some of the broad attacks on cities and city life. . . The book remains a remarkable achievement, enlightening both as to architecture and as to social life. It is one of the best expressions I know of the organic one-ness of architecture and humanity." Sat. rev. of lit.

1 Architecture 28-10186

A stimulating book on the modernist movement in architecture. In it "one of the most distinguished of modern French architects discusses with insight the significance and the potentiality of the new engineering architecture, which includes not only houses, but ocean liners, airplanes and automobiles." Providence

"A book which has had a success in France, and it is a kind of manifesto in which important points are reiterated as if the writer were a prophet. . . The book is illustrated with a great many interesting photographs of buildings and of machinery and factories and the like, and in few books are the illustrations chosen so well to bear out the writer's points." Times (London) lit. sup.

1 Architecture 27-21023

"The first part of the book deals with architecture as a profession, the training and qualifications of the architect and his relations to his client. Part two is an outline of the story of architecture." Book rev. digest

"Mr Price's book proves to be an 'A B C' mainly for the student of architecture rather than for the person who desires a general survey to inform and enhance his own appreciation of old buildings and new. Mr Price is a competent guide, but in 140 pages he cannot complete the survey." Springfield Republican

1 Architecture A10-2371

The Brantwood edition of this work, which is a very desirable one, is out of print, 1939

"This book was first published in 1849; it is a marvelous piece of work . . . compact and vigorous in thought. . . . As a book of art criticism, it is of no value. The architecture it treats of is a dream, a conception of the writer, having no connection with the actual Gothic buildings of Europe, upon a close study of which it is supposed to be founded." "By no means the usual outline history, but an interpretation of building as an expression of social ideas . . . The author points out that in Egypt building was done for the immortalizing of a few at the expense of the many . . . [In] the Gothic age, Mr. Whitaker sees an interlude of free and happy craftsmanship . . . Tracing the development of English and American building to modern times, the author hails as 'the one vital spark' the work of Louis H.

A well-illustrated book which will be useful to both the student of architecture and the general reader. Contents: v 1 From Roman times to the Reformation, originally published 1928; v2 From Tudor times to the end of the Georgian period

"Mr. Godfrey's book has the great merit of really explaining how things happened, not only in relation to social changes, but as a result of different materials and methods of workmanship. He gives the 'reason why' of stylistic features, and we cannot think of a writer who contributes more to the understanding as distinct from the mere knowledge of achitectural history." "A beautiful book in which the French cathedral and associated structures are set forth in some four hundred pages of text accompanied by one hundred and eighty-three reproduced drawings and sketches by Joseph Pennell. The architectural route has been covered leisurely . . .beginning in the cities of Provence, was continued to other centers of the Romanesque in France—to cities in Aquitane, the far north, Auvergne and Languedoc. Then followed the journeys to the Gothic churches—from Albi to Paris, from Bourges to Beauvais, from Chartres and Le Mans to Laon and Rheims, from Amiens to Rouen." Book rev. digest

Short, Ernest Henry, 1875-
History of religious architecture. new and rev ed Macmillan 1936 304p illus $3.50 726

1 Christian art and symbolism 2 Church architecture

New edition of a book published in 1926 under the title: "The house of God." The number of illustrations has been reduced from 110 to 64. Also the page is somewhat smaller. Almost no changes have been made in the text
"A comprehensive history of religious architecture and symbolism which traces from its beginnings the effort of man to form sanctuaries to enshrine his idea of God and as places for common worship. From the earliest sanctuary, which was nothing more than a clearing in the natural forest, to the most beautiful cathedral, the development of the house of God is shown to be a continuous story in which history, faith and craftsmanship are interwoven." Book rev. digest
"The book can be read with equal profit as an untechnical history of religions or as an untechnical history of architecture. In both cases, too, the freedom from technicalities is the result of clear thinking on the fruits of a very wide range of reading and observation." Times (London) lit. sup.

728 RESIDENCES

Trade publications by dealers in builder's supplies have been omitted from this list. Such publications vary in worth but when they are good are often very useful in libraries. They cost little or nothing and give floor plans and exterior views of small houses. A few typical firms which issue these publications have been recommended. These are:

American face brick association, Chicago

Architects' small house service bureau of the United States, inc., Minneapolis

Portland cement association, Chicago

A number of desirable books in this field out of print, 1939, are:

Houses of stone. Putnam 1936 169p illus $3.50 728

1 Architecture, Domestic 2 Stone houses 36-35033

First published 1933. This edition contains 6 additional pages on insulation and heating, but is not sufficient to warrant replacing earlier edition

"The author describes the construction of field stone houses making use of Flagg masonry, which involves walls of concrete faced with stone. All the problems of such building are discussed—the processes of laying the stone, running the concrete, and the use of steel reinforcement, as well as those other problems of roofing and finishing common to all types of building. The twenty-two plans show a wide range of size and adaptation to family needs and to topography, while the many excellent photographic illustrations reveal the charm of such houses." Bkl.

‡ Life; newly tr. into English by J. A. Symonds; with mezzotint portrait, and sixteen reproductions of Cellini's works. Scribner liv,464p illus $1.75 735

27-3598

Cellini was "the first goldsmith of his time, an adequate sculptor, a restless traveler, an indefatigable workman, a Bohemian of the purest water, a turbulent bravo, a courtier and companion of princes; finally, a Florentine who used his native idiom with incomparable vivacity of style. . . . Those who have made themselves thoroly familiar with Cellini's 'Memoirs' possess the substance of that many-sided epoch [the 16th century] in the form of an epitome. It is the first book which a student of the Italian renaissance should handle in order to obtain the right direction for his more minute researches. . . . From the pages of this book the Genius of the renaissance, incarnate in a single personality, leans forth and speaks to us." J. A. Symonds

Symonds' translation is a classic but expurgated. It was first published in two volumes in 1887. It is also obtainable in the Modern library (Modern lib. 1927 95c)

Another translation is available as follows:

Cellini, Benvenuto. Life; tr. by Anne Macdonell. Dutton 1926 368p illus $3 Lacks the poetic quality of the translation by Symonds but has dramatic force

‡ Anatomy and drawing. 3d ed rev and enl Favor, Ruhl & co. 1936 [193]p illus $3.50 743

1 Anatomy, Artistic 36-10266

First published 1928, revised 1931. The 1936 edition contains some changes in the plates of which the book is composed and several additional plates, chiefly in Part 1, proportion and drawing

"The purpose of this book is to present in a simple and direct manner the subject of anatomy as it is applied to Art. As little text as possible has been used, and much dependence has been placed on pictorial representations because the latter are a more direct means of impressing the artist with construction and form." 1 Anatomy, Artistic 36-7970

First published 1907 and frequently reprinted

"Modernizing this old and popular book—a veritable dictionary of figure drawing—has made of it a new book. The size has been increased to 7½x10 inches. Fifty absolutely new Vanderpoel drawings have been added, giving, in all, more than 300 drawings and sketches. New plates and new type make the format far more interesting. George B. Bridgman . . . was chosen to redesign the former 'Human Figure.'" School arts magazine

745 ORNAMENTAL DESIGN

Alphabet 1 General treatises

Since 745 is not yet subdivided in the latest edition of the Decimal classification, this number has been used here for (1) books on ornamental design in general, and (2) the practical application of design as exemplified in books on leather work, rugs, stencil work, textile fabrics, wall paper, etc. For the convenience of those who may wish to have the general treatises together in a separate alphabet, the material is here arranged in two alphabets: 1. General treatises; 2. Special applications. Books on lettering are given the number 745L in this catalog

The following books are recommended for larger libraries and for those libraries needing more material for designers:

Ball, K. M. Decorative motives of oriental art. . . Dodd 1927 xxvi, 286p illus o.p. 1939

Blossfeldt, Karl. Art forms in nature, first-second series. Weyhe 1929-32 2v ills o.p. 1939 The publisher reports a popular edition for $3.75 which contains 96 of the 120 plates in the first series only. Beautiful and enlarged photographs of plants for decorative design

Wilkins, J. G. Nature; modern decorative illustration. Perleberg 1933 18 plates $6 A portfolio of plates on the use of large animals in design

Wilkins, J. G. ed. Research design in nature. Practical drawing co. 1931 2v $30 Consists of 268 plates, showing over 5000 designs in 17 different subjects on 9x12 inch sheets. The drawings were made by students of the Art institute, Chicago, at the Field museum of natural history. A specialist in art education says of it "costly but more worth while for illustrative material and applied design from nature than any other American publication"

Best Maugard, Adolfo, 1891-

Method for creative design. [rev ed] Knopf 1927 183p illus $2.50 745

1 Design, Decorative 38-15941

"The method set forth herein, in a simple and fascinating manner, is primarily for those who love drawing, but have not the time for the study that individual creation requires." Providence

"Mr Best-Maugard explains the fundamental law of design and its seven elements, shows the student how to apply it in his own work and leads him along gradually from the first simple uses of each motive to the more difficult problems of composition, perspective and the representation of the human figure. Throughout there is full and simple exposition of the author's meaning in both the text and the accompanying illustrative designs. The second part of the volume is devoted to philosophical analysis, discussion and representation of the theoretical side of the theme." N.Y. Times

"A study of heraldry from the decorative rather than the historical or technical viewpoint. The illustrations are drawn from the heraldry of various countries and cover a wide range, from the beginnings of the art down to the eighteenth century. The text, which includes some account of the heraldic terms most frequently met with, is for the most part concerned with a critical analysis of the examples illustrated. The second half of the book deals with floral forms as used in decoration." Book rev. digest

"A storehouse of attractive models from which artists engaged in depicting this official blazonry may draw inspiration. He produces examples of really effective work from periods usually considered to be inferior in the matter of heraldic style." Times (London) lit. sup.

"'Whether you realize it or not, the power of creating forms and patterns lies within you, and you should give yourself the pleasure that comes from this kind of self-expression.' This book is mainly an application of the principle thus laid down in the foreword. It carries many plates showing how designs can be devised out of almost anything, from scribble drawings and abstract floral, animal, and human forms to landscapes and groups of objects; and by the use of line, contrasts of black and white, or color. The suggestions are arranged in increasing order of difficulty, and there is just enough explanation to suggest how to go and do likewise, but not just to copy." Journal of home economics

First edition 1916. In the 1933 edition chapter 11, on decoration of large primary masses in wood, has been rewritten and four new plates have been substituted

The author "has rendered manual arts teachers a great service by gathering together, classifying, and sifting current information on the theory and practice of making things in clay, wood, and metal. The net result is presented in this volume . . . Marginal captions, chapter summaries and review questions, together with a complete index help to make this an indispensable addition to the working library of any teacher of the arts." School arts magazine

Whittick, Arnold, 1898-

* Symbols for designers; a handbook on the application of symbols and symbolism to design, for the use of architects, sculptors, ecclesiastical and memorial designers, commercial artists and students of symbolism; foreword by Sir Herbert Baker. . . Lockwood, C. 1935 168p illus 12s 6d 745

1 Design, Decorative 2 Symbolism 35-4066

"After an introductory chapter on the philosophical meaning and the aesthetic aspects of symbolism [the author] proceeds to his dictionary of symbols arranged in alphabetical order. He gives the history of each symbol, an account of its use in the past, and advice for its use in the present. The symbols are of all kinds—religious and secular. [He does not] concern himself with the psycho-analytic interpretation and use of symbolism, and he is chiefly occupied with the conscious meaning of symbols. There are fifteen plates and a larger number of illustrations in the text." Times (London) lit. sup.

745L LETTERING

In the Decimal classification there is no separate number for books on lettering, and they may be put with other books in 745. For libraries where it is a convenience to have them separate, it is suggested that L be added to the class number

In addition to the titles noted in this class, the following are recommended:

French, T. W. and Meiklejohn, Robert. Essentials of lettering; a manual for students and designers. 3d ed McGraw 1912 94p illus $1.50

Hewitt, Graily
Lettering for students and craftsmen. . . Lippincott 1930 336p illus (New art lib.) $6 745L
1 Lettering 30-33934
"A master of lettering who has for many years been a teacher of calligraphy is the author of this book on the history of manuscript writing. The volume contains also a technical discussion, with illustrations, of the theory and practice of good lettering from the standpoint of both beauty and utility." Book rev. digest
"The legacy of Mr. Graily Hewitt's training and experience is condensed into this beautiful book; a book as good to look at as to read, as practically useful as it is inspiring, and destined, one may hope, to bring back the sense of lettering to a world so long content to suck the meaning of 'printed matter' that it has lost the finer faculty of its eyes." Saturday rev.
